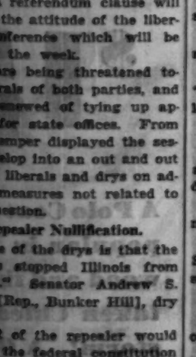
Emmerson Praised and Denounced.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., April 13.—[Special.]—The legislature gives full signs tonight of being torn wide open by Gov. Emmerson's veto of the O'Grady-McDermott repealer of the state prohibition law. Republican liberals and drys took opposite views.



GOV. L. L. EMMERSON. [Wallinger Photo.]

The liberals loudly declare that the Anti-Saloon league has prevailed with the executive over the November popular referendum and the Republican state platform. They hold the veto slams the Republican party into a coffin and nails down the lid for 1932.

The drys maintain that the governor is following his oath to support the constitution of the United States, including the eighteenth amendment; that the referendum was not binding, and that if the repealer had become law in Illinois, for the first time in its history, would be without state laws to control liquor.

Drys Call Rum Big Issue.

The Democrats hold that the veto makes prohibition the great state issue in Illinois in the next general election.

"Prohibition now becomes a square cut issue between the Republicans and Democrats in the governorship campaign of 1932," says Thomas Duncan, Democratic state chairman.

Representative Tom O'Grady declared tonight he will move to pass the repealer over the veto Wednesday. But the liberals see no chance of getting the necessary two-thirds vote in each house. In the lower branch the repealer had 91 votes to 56 when it passed, and the liberals claim they can perhaps muster the necessary 102 votes. But in the senate it passed by a bare majority, getting 26 to 24, and the liberals admit there is no chance of lining up eight more votes.

Liberals Plan Conference.

Whether the bill will be reintroduced with a referendum clause will depend upon the attitude of the liberals at a conference which will be held later in the week.

Recruits are being threatened today by liberals of both parties, and the talk is renewed of tying up appropriations for state offices. From the present temper displayed the session may develop into an out and out fight between liberals and drys on administration measures not related to the liquor question.

Holds Repealer Nullification.

The attitude of the drys is that the governor has stopped Illinois from "nullification." Senator Andrew S. Culbertson [Rep., Bunker Hill], dry leader, said:

"The effect of the repealer would be to nullify the federal constitution and to leave Illinois with no laws on the statute books governing intoxicating liquors. I have very strong views on this measure as one of nullification."

The view that by the veto, Gov. Emmerson has given greater ear to the Anti-Saloon league than to the Republican state convention, its platform, and the state-wide referendum party prompted, was expressed by Senator Victor P. Michel [Rep., Joliet], who led the fight in the senate for passage of the repealer.

Finds Governor Out of Party.

"The action of Gov. Emmerson repudiates the platform accepted by his party at the convention last August, of which he was chairman," said Senator Michel. "By this veto he has ceased to be a Republican leader in fact. In addition, he has broken faith with the people of this state. He has listened to the minority, represented by the Anti-Saloon league and the drys, in preference to the wishes of the great majority.

"The governor has stated in his veto message that this was not a political question, but a social one. The record election we clearly will show that it is a political question. His insertion of a referendum attached to a local bill is ridiculous. We've already had three referenda."

Senator Thomas J. Courtney [Dem., Joliet] said:

SPANISH POLICE SHOOT RIOTERS; CABINET TO QUIT

BULLETIN.

LONDON, April 14 (Tuesday.)—(AP)—King Alfonso of Spain late last night informed the Madrid correspondent of the Daily Mail that he had no intention of abdicating the throne. It is his intention, he said, to act in strict accordance with the constitutional and royalist traditions of Spain.

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, April 13.—There are two governments in Spain tonight.

One is the ministry of the crown, which will hand its resignation to King Alfonso tomorrow morning, publicly advising him to seek counsel where he can and, privately, to abdicate.

The other is the "government" of the "republic," which waits none too patiently for that abdication, but is already giving orders to Alfonso XIII. to get out. All pretense that yesterday's municipal elections, which turned into a Republican landslide and a national plebiscite as well, is anything but a staggering defeat for the crown and, more importantly, a clear demand for a republic was dropped early today.

Abdication is now a word heard spoken tearfully by some and jubilantly by others.

Guards Fire on Students.

Rumors that the abdication was already an accomplished fact were spread about at midnight. It was said that Alfonso had already left by auto for the border. Thousands jammed the streets. Cries of "Death to the king" were intermingled with joyous shouts of "He has fled." The marchers demonstrated under the benevolent eyes of the police.

A different fate met a mob of 4,000 students who began a march to the home of Alcala Zamora, the little politician, who is preparing to take up the Bourbon succession. Civil guards met them and without warning, fired into their ranks. Thirty fell wounded, five seriously.

Mounted guards barred the streets to the palace, where King Alfonso was, in fact, enjoying a motion picture show. Royal hussars, holding their rifles, tonight are shivering in the wind that howls around the Bourbon palace, where Alfonso is making his decision between fighting for it and leaving it all.

King Advised to Abdicate.

The king himself heard of the possibility of his abdication today when Count Romanones, his minister of state, Marquis Alhucemas, representing the liberal elements in the government, and Admiral Aznar, the prime minister, told him there is no other way out.

"Spain has spoken," they told their master. "Nothing but violence, and perhaps not even that, can thwart her now."

And so the cabinet tonight decided nothing remains for them but immediate resignation. That King Alfonso will put up a stiff fight to save his crown was indicated by the announcement of Count Romanones that Juan de la Cierva, present minister of public works and one of the stanchest supporters of the crown, will attempt to form a strictly monarchist cabinet. A Cierva ministry, it is believed, means a dictatorship.

Serve Ultimatum on King.

Here is where the ministers of the "republic" come in. In a note signed "The Provisional Government of Spain," they served an ultimatum on the king. The first was delivered publicly. The last one was a private message. The essence of both was the demand that he abdicate. The notes were followed with a statement by the Socialist labor headquarters threatening a general strike if the will of the Spanish people, "clearly expressed for the first time in history," is not promptly met.

"Promptly," the king has been informed, means tomorrow night.

The public ultimatum of Spain's "republican government" read:

"The voting in the principal Spanish capitals and smaller urban centers resulted in a plebiscite unfavorable to the monarchy and for a republic. We invoke now the highest organs of the state and all branches of government and armed forces and call upon them to submit to national will, which they only in vain may try to ignore through evasive or silence-resistance. If there is no adequate response, we must and will act with

SPRING IS HERE; PURPLE MARTINS SEEN IN SUBURB

Two pairs of purple martins, that most astute of birds when it comes to forecasting the weather and which come north only when warm weather definitely sets in, were seen yesterday at Flossmoor, about 26 miles from the loop.

They have not yet been seen in the city parks, however, according to Harry S. Richards, assistant general superintendent of the south park board of commissioners.

The robins have been here since March 10, and the grackles fully that long, Mr. Richards said. The fox sparrows have stopped on their way to the far north. But the purple martins, despite the fact that lilac leaves are out, crocuses blooming, and daffodils in bud, have hung back.

If the purple martins seen in Flossmoor move on to the colony of houses in Washington and Jackson parks they will find them all ready.

Steve O'Donnell Target of Gangsters' Guns

Steve O'Donnell, veteran of most of the beer wars since the advent of prohibition, was fired on late last night as he and his wife were passing 55th street and Damen avenue. Two men in another automobile, according to O'Donnell, missed him with a whole fusilade of shots. When he arrived at his home, 1756 West Garfield boulevard, he found that half a dozen bullets had been fired into a bedroom window on the second floor. O'Donnell ascribed the shooting to political foes, but police were of the belief that it grew out of booze rivalry.

Hoover Says the Red Cross Averted Dole

Washington, D. C., April 13.—[Special.]—President Hoover today gave the Red Cross credit for averting the adoption of the government dole system during the drought emergency last winter.

In an address opening the annual convention of the American Red Cross, the President stated that the refusal by officials of the organization to accept a $25,000,000 relief appropriation proposed by a coalition of Democrats and radical Republicans during the short session of congress had helped to preserve the great ideal of voluntary aid in emergencies.

Had the Red Cross officials yielded to the desires of those who wished to finance the Red Cross relief activities from the federal treasury, the Red Cross would have been made impotent in the face of every future national emergency, the President said.

Drought a New Problem.

"The drought presented a new type of problem for the Red Cross—the problem of famine in over two millions of people," the President said. "Your leaders, alive to the possibility of suffering which would be the inescapable result during the winter, began as early as last August to mobilize the Red Cross to meet the inevitable burden. It was that far-sighted action and that early action which enabled the saving of this multitude of people from infinite suffering.

"Unfortunately, men less familiar with the resources and the ability and the courage of the American people in mutual action under their own Red Cross, had, no doubt, genuinely concerned over the growing seriousness of the situation, were skeptical of your abilities and the forces which give it strength, and were insistent that the Red Cross should abandon its voluntary character, should abandon its independence and its foundations in service which are part of the spiritual life of our country, and become in effect a government bureau through federal appropriations as the source of its funds.

Calls Decision Momentous.

"They will not realize that the Red Cross represents a vital and precious force in our people—their ability and strength in voluntary action and their sense of service and of moral responsibility. For the Red Cross springs from the people; it is of the people; it is a part of their spiritual expression.

"It was a momentous decision which confronted you to refuse the easy course that was proposed, and it has been due to you officers and members of the Red Cross in every city and hamlet of the United States to your courage, your resolution and devotion, that it has been possible, even in a time of extreme economic difficulty, to prove your strength and ability to meet national emergencies by finding from your members the financial resources on the one hand and the ability and the sense of service for distribution on the other.

"If your officers had yielded on this occasion the Red Cross would have been rendered impotent in the face of every future national emergency, for it would have been inevitable to turn to the government and the taxpayers.

"It would have meant the destruction of the Red Cross, and it would have meant the destruction of something even greater than voluntary service—it would have injured the spiritual responses of the American people. It would have been a step on the pathway of government doles.

"We are dealing also with the highest thing in our civilization, that is, the sense of personal responsibility of neighbor for neighbor, the spirit of charity and benevolence in the individual, the holding aloft the lamp of voluntary action in American life. A voluntary deed by a man impressed with the sense of responsibility and brotherhood of man is infinitely more precious to our national ideals and national spirit than a thousandfold poured from the treasury of the government under the compulsion of law. Your organization is indeed the highest form of self-government that is for our people to organize themselves without the force of law."

The address today marked the beginning of a summer speaking campaign which will take Mr. Hoover to the central states in June. He will speak twice tomorrow at the Pan-American day exercises and at the celebration of the founding of Tuskegee institute. He also will attend the ball game and toss out the first ball.

Fireman John F. Szczepanek, 2307 North Trumbull avenue, of Truck company 22, stepped on a nail while searching in the tunnel and was taken from active duty.

Sixty Are Victims 35 Feet Below the Street.

Pictures taken at the scene of the Sanitary district tunnel disaster and photographs of the victims occupy the entire back page of this edition.

Nine men are known to be dead as the result of a fire disaster last night in a huge intercepting sewer tunnel of the sanitary district under construction 35 feet below the surface at 22d and Laflin streets.

Eight or ten other men, mostly firemen, among them a division marshal and a captain, were still trapped early this morning in the dense smoke and gas of the tunnel. It is not known whether these men are still alive.

Forty Rescuers Overcome.

Forty other firemen were overcome in efforts to save the trapped victims. Twenty-six firemen were taken to a hospital in serious condition. The total casualty list of dead and injured numbers sixty men.

One policeman was killed as an indirect result of the fire tragedy when he was struck and killed a few blocks from the scene by an ambulance taking victims to a hospital.

Little Hope for Trapped Men.

At 3 o'clock this morning little hope was held for the four or five firemen and an equal number of laborers believed to be trapped in the tunnel. Among them are Division Marshal Patrick Pierce and Capt. Timothy O'Neill of truck 14. The other firemen in the trap are members of engine company 23, who were the first rescuers to enter the deathtrap.

From about 7:30 o'clock last night, an hour after the fire was first discovered, until dawn this morning the scene at the disaster was reminiscent of a mine catastrophe. There was case after case of unswerving heroism where firemen on the verge of collapse battled with their superiors to go back into the inferno to save their comrades. At the shaft mouth, from which belched acrid clouds of smoke laden with carbon monoxide, stood scores of fire officials, police, and others striving to complete the rescue.

Bodies Are Brought Up.

All efforts to save any of the living who may still be in the tunnel appeared futile. At intervals during the night the firemen, with the partial protection of respirators, brought bodies to the surface.

As each victim was brought into view hope lessened for the chances of the handful of men still trapped. All around, stretching into blocks, thousands of silent men and women watched or tried to watch the work as the half suffocated rescuers themselves were carried gasping to the surface. Three priests lent their ministerial duty to the dead and injured.

Whatever hope there is of saving the trapped men lies in the chance that they may be in one of the two air compression work chambers of the tunnel, where the fumes cannot reach them.

How Disaster Started.

It was about 6:30 o'clock that the fire was noted. A group of workmen descended into the tunnel to locate a leakage. According to Timothy Ryan, an official of the company constructing the bore, they summoned Albert Martin, a plasterer, to help them. Martin, Ryan said, used a candle. The taper dropped, igniting some sawdust on the floor. Three-quarters of an hour passed before firemen were called.

Three Rescuers Saved.

Truck company 14, commanded by Capt. O'Neill, arrived first. A thin curl of white smoke circled from the shaft mouth which is at about the center of, and the only entrance to the 450 foot portion of the tunnel which has been completed. O'Neill and his crew hurried below. Three of his comrades emerged, half dead. Fifteen minutes later. O'Neill and another member of his company were still below early this morning.

The men of Company 14 descended without gas masks, not realizing, it is believed, the full peril of their mission.

Members of engine company 23 reached the scene shortly after truck 14 and Capt. James Murphy and Firemen William Goehrke, William Karstens, William Coyne, John Daly, and Richard Gamell were lowered in the elevator to the bottom of the shaft. Whether or not they carried masks was not known, but it was doubtful. Early reports indicated these men were with Division Marshal Pierce and Capt. O'Neill in the inferno.

When they failed to return after remaining below their waiting comrades became frantic. Up to this time the disastrous nature of the blaze was not suspected. Squads of rescue men hurried down the shaft. They emerged gasping and choking to the top, pleading for air.

Within a short time the fire in the tunnel gained headway, dense smoke belched from the shaft and apparatus and ten rescue squads were summoned. Shortly after midnight one-fourth of the entire fire department was on the scene, and all men off duty were ordered to report to their stations.

Whole Squads Overcome.

Batallion Chief Geary of the 8th batallion led a crew of firemen into the pit. Fifteen minutes later he and a fireman were carried out unconscious by John Faecker of squad 2.

Other rescuers, wearing masks, went into the inferno. They emerged, some of them semi-conscious. Entire squads were overcome as they tried to do the seemingly impossible. As time passed and fireman after fireman was overcome and carried to the top by succeeding crews of rescuers they were carried into an improvised hospital in the offices of the McParland Hardwood Lumber company, around the corner. They were revived with air from oxygen tanks, then taken to hospitals.

Marshal Michael Corrigan and Coroner Herman N. Bundensen arrived. With them was Henry Sonnenschein, Mayor Cermak's secretary. Sonnenschein telephoned to the mayor, who is in Florida, and was instructed to "spare no expense" in rescue work.

Two hours after the firemen began their fight, the injured and overcome had mounted to more than fifty. The knowledge of the firemen and workers still below seemingly inspired the rescuers. From an official of the construction company it was learned the trapped men were probably concealed in the air chamber at the west of the tunnel.

Marshal Corrigan ordered out two hose companies to spray the brick paving at that point. The location was estimated from blueprints. At the same time the air pumps kept up the pressure in the chamber.

Instances of Heroism.

Calls were sent to suburban fire departments. The first response was from Oak Park. Chief Watters, driving 60 miles an hour, delivered a newer type gas mask. It was on this delivery that one of the common, yet outstanding, examples of heroism occurred.

"Who will volunteer to use this and go into the tunnel?" some one asked.

"Here!" shouted a voice. From the ranks of a circle of firemen stepped Irving Strom, 28 years old, of squad 8. He had already been down two times with the ordinary equipment. He fitted the mask, inspected the air line, and went down. A fireman protected by the charcoal mask used by the city force followed.

They groped about for five minutes, stumbled over a body, and signaled for the raising of the elevator. The body, that of a laborer, was taken to the surface. Four times Strom descended and each time brought up a body.

Ropes Link Up Firemen.

Strom was not alone in his heroism. Squad leaders led their men. They were the last to leave the death tunnel. They emerged, got a wisp of air, and descended again. At the shaft stood Corrigan. As each man stepped on the lift platform, Capt. William T. Maloney inspected their air gauges.

Three men were sent down at a time after the first two hours. They were linked to one another by a rope. Their signals for lowering was three rings of a bell, and for raising four rings. As each outfit descended it would crawl on hands and knees along boards, over clay, and through water. At no time was there a further advance than fifty feet.

It was impossible, even with the masks, to remain below a half hour. Many firemen overstayed the air limit of twenty minutes in their oxygen containers and were themselves rescued.

Engineer Risks Life.

Joe Tearney, hoisting engineer, also risked his life. He continued at his post at the controls of the elevator at the shaft gap. Clouds of smoke belched around him, concealing him from sight. He remained on duty for more than an hour, getting a breath of fresh air only at intervals. Finally he toppled from his seat, and on the edge of the shaft mouth. He was dragged away by firemen, and relieved by John Morrissey.

One instance of heroism was that by Maurice Cahill, superintendent of construction for the Ryan Construction company, which is building the tunnel for the sanitary district. He told firemen he knew every foot of the bore, and insisted on leading a fire squad below. He put on a gas mask, went down the elevator, and groped into the thick, heavy smoke.

Cahill progressed ten feet and collapsed. He was speedily carried to the surface and revived with oxygen. Cahill tried to go below again, but was restrained.

Twenty-six in Hospital.

By midnight twenty-six firemen had been taken to St. Anthony's hospital. One of the ambulances struck and killed Policeman Harry Fielder of the Marquette station, at 22d street and Damen avenue, a few blocks away from the tunnel.

Each hour saw the hope of rescue dim. It also saw the gathering of large crowds, many of them members of the families of missing or injured firemen and workers.

Twice during the night efforts were made to get ventilation into the tunnel by tearing down the superstructure above the shaft. Firemen hacked away with axes, removing the roof, but even this failed to aid materially. It was hoped by the ventilation not only to aid the trapped victims, but to make the fire burn itself out.

Relay Teams Are Used.

Into the mouths of the shaft were played two high power spotlights, mounted on fire department trucks. So dense was the smoke most of the time that the beams failed to penetrate more than half of the 35 feet down. Firemen carried electric torches, but these were of little use. Virtually all the rescue was by sense of feel.

The last of the bodies of the nine known dead was brought up at 1 o'clock this morning. By this hour, the smoke and fumes were so severe below that firemen could not complete the recovery of a body except by several dashes into the tunnel. One crew would carry a body ten feet, then go above for air. Another crew would descend, and carry the body another ten feet, and so on.

Hard to Get Divers.

Walter Cahill, vice president of the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock company, was called at his home, 5307 University avenue, early this morning and informed that Coroner Bundesen had issued a plea for the help of divers.

Mr. Cahill said that the equipment of divers is heavy and difficult to move.

"We are not a municipal organization," he added, "and, while we have done some emergency work of this type in the past, we found that we could not collect for services rendered. We won't do anything unless the coroner calls us personally."

A few moments later Charles Gunderson, 2040 North Sawyer avenue, the noted diver, offered to enter the tunnel in his own equipment. A TRIBUNE truck was sent to carry Gunderson and his equipment to the scene.

The difficulties of rescue were magnified by the length of the bore, which extends 225 feet along 22d street on either side of Laflin street for a total length of 450 feet.

Rescue work was hampered by crowds. Coroner Bundesen repeatedly ordered lanes cleared so that overcome firemen could be carried to the emergency hospital. Frequently, as the elevator rose to the top, three or four forms were found lying still on the platform. Generally, they were those of three rescuers, and one victim.

Order Inquiry Into Death of Chicagoan in LosAngeles

Los Angeles, Cal., April 13.—[Special.]—Coroner Frank Nance today ordered an investigation into the death of Frank J. O'Brien, Chicago contractor, in a hospital after being found unconscious in his cell in the city jail yesterday. O'Brien had been arrested on an intoxication charge at a hotel. In some manner not explained he suffered head injuries after being locked up and was carried out of his cell on a stretcher.

DEATH PENALTY JURY IS SOUGHT AT ARSON TRIAL

Selection of a jury pledged to inflict the death penalty in a proper case was started yesterday in Judge Joseph Sabath's Criminal court, where Joseph Rossow, a waiter, and Martin Borad, 18 years old, were placed on trial for murder resulting from an incendiary fire started to collect insurance.

The fire, at a butcher shop at 3649 North Kedzie avenue, caused the death of two children, Jerome Israelson, 5, and his brother, Homer, 4, and the severe burning of Mrs. Dora Israelson, the mother.

Assistant State's Attorneys Mal Coghlan and Daniel Covelli, who are in charge of the prosecution, refused to make any concessions to any of the defendants.

Jacob Tatleman, alleged firebug, and Harry Goldvarg, the butcher whose shop was burned to collect $3,500 insurance, waived jury trials and their cases are held in abeyance until the others are tried. Louis Footlik, owner of a fixture store, who is also under indictment, was granted a separate trial.

JUMP 3,000 FEET WITH PARACHUTE TO ESCAPE BOMBS

Norfolk, Va., April 13.—[Special.]—Forced to parachute from an airplane, 3,000 feet in the air to escape certain death from the possible explosion of two live bombs that were held fast to the machine by suspending wires, Maj. Charles A. French and Capt. Robert G. Breene, landed safely near Newport News late this afternoon.

Their plane, one of the bombing machines used by the army aviation group at Langley field, had been engaged with others in a war game near Mulberry island in the James river. They had dropped several bombs near the island without difficulty and scored two hits on targets. The last two bombs the plane carried, instead of dropping when released, hung on suspended wires and could not be freed.

The two officers faced the problem of remaining in the plane and trusting to luck that the bombs would not explode when a landing was made or of being blown to pieces if an explosion did occur. They decided to leap. The plane fell about eight miles distant, where both bombs exploded.

2 YANKS SLAIN IN NICARAGUA BANDIT ATTACK

Many Others Killed in Jungle Battle.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BRAGMAN BLUFF, Nicaragua, April 13.—A long expected attack on this American lumber town, located seven miles from Puerto Cabezas, occurred early yesterday morning, when 300 bandits, approaching under the cover of darkness through the jungle, surprised the national guard, killing two American marine officers in command. The American dead are Capt. Harlan Perry and Sergt. Taylor. Lieut. Clyde E. Darrah of Springfield, Ill., was also reported to have been killed in the early checkup, but later was found to have emerged safely.

The native guard company was dispersed after its supply of ammunition had become exhausted during the fierce battle.

A lumber company's private train was captured during the fight. Plantations, offices and the commissary of the Standard Fruit company, a New Orleans concern, were captured. The bandits looted and burned the commissary, taking everything movable and slaughtering all who opposed them. Scores of natives are reported to have been killed.

Attack Long Expected.

Two months ago the American manager here sent radio messages to naval officers at Cristobal, Panama, asking help. He declared that an attack was expected at any time. Yesterday radio messages were again sent from here appealing for assistance.

The bandits had been gathering in the interior at San Pedro, state of Nueva Segovia, where American owned gold mines are located. They began their advance from there last Thursday, creeping into the lumber camp on Saturday night, and surprising the soldiers Sunday morning.

Bragman Bluff lumber camp is owned by the Standard Fruit company, which is a unit of Vaccaro Brothers of New Orleans, and is the United Fruit company's biggest competitor. More than 1,000 Americans are employed here, and all have been armed to protect women and others against further attack.

U. S. Rushes Warships.

PANAMA CITY, April 13.—The special service squadron flagship Rochester left Corinto tonight and is speeding to the east coast of Nicaragua by way of the canal. The cruiser Asheville from Cristobal is expected at Puerto Cabezas, near the scene of the bandit attack at Bragman Bluff, early tomorrow.

Reports tonight said bombing planes from Managua are flying back and forth, dropping their loads on the bandits. Information from the region is meager, and it is believed that the lumber company's private radio station at Puerto Cabezas was put out of commission by the bandits while they were approaching the scene of the attack.

Forest Fires Cause $1,000,000 Loss in Lumber Yard

WISCONSIN ACTS TO AID VICTIMS OF FOREST FIRES

Shift in the Wind Saves Menaced Towns.

Madison, Wis., April 13.—[Special.]—Although several towns in northern Wisconsin which were in danger of destruction last night have brought the forest fires that menaced them under control temporarily at least, the state conservation commission announced here today that the flames were still raging generally.

Immense property damage has been done and some scores of persons are known to be homeless. So serious is the situation that the state house of representatives, after the conservation commission had announced that fire conditions in the woods would continue to be "the most serious in history" unless rain falls soon, voted to investigate immediately the plight of residents of the affected areas.

A resolution passed by the lower house urged that five members of the legislature be appointed and that they report back on the amount of aid needed.

The town of Crandon, where it was reported the flames were advancing on an eight mile front Sunday evening, was saved by a shift in the wind. Kennedy, a small village in Ashland county west of Park Falls, which was cut off from all communication yesterday morning, was found to be safe, although an extensive area around it had been burned over. The loss there included 100,000 feet of logs.

At Menominee, Mich., just over the Wisconsin line, damage estimated at more than $1,000,000 was caused yesterday by a blaze in the lumber yards of the J. W. Wells company. Thirty million feet of lumber and 2,000 feet of saw logs were included. Firemen from Escanaba, Mich., Green Bay, and Marinette, Wis., assisted in keeping the blaze from spreading to homes and business houses in the city.

Joe Grein Starts Brewing Trouble for Scale Cheaters

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

When Joe Grein, who served as city sealer 25 years ago under Mayor Edward F. Dunne and also under the late Mayor Fred A. Busse, called the roll call yesterday in his capacity as the newly appointed city sealer, he found six deputy sealers who had worked under him 25 years ago.

"The tears came in their eyes as I shook their hands," said City Sealer Grein.

Two names which were not called at roll call were those of Harry Hochstein, chief deputy city sealer, and James Pacelli, both temporary employés in the régime of Dan Serritella, a Capone lieutenant who was ousted by Mayor Cermak. Grein had made the firing of Hochstein and Pacelli his first duty. Hochstein is a lieutenant of Morris Eller of the "Bloody Twentieth" ward.

Grein's "Boys and Girls."

Addressing the "girls and boys," as he called the department employés, City Sealer Grein said:

"We want to help Chicago's World's Fair mayor to make the world sit up and take notice. So let's bear down on these racketeers who cheat the housewives. Let them know we mean business."

Joe Grein had no difficulty in making a good section of the country sit up and take notice when he was city sealer 25 years ago.

Newspaper clippings, yellow with age, which Joe has kept in a big scrap book, show photographs of scales, bushel baskets, measures, and wooden containers, confiscated from cheaters, as they blazed away in big bonfires on the lake shore.

"I went after the big shots, too, and I won't be afraid to again," said the ruddy faced Joe, who wore a well tailored spring suit of gray with gray silk shirt to match.

"I remember the time I went with a few deputies to arrest some cheating fellows in the Haymarket district," he said, laughing his hearty big laugh. "It was 4 o'clock in the morning. One of the cheaters got troublesome and I knocked him clean out. And I can still rout 'em out."

City Sealer Grein, known as "the mayor of Randolph street," was born in Chicago in 1872 and has grown up with the city. For 50 years he had a business across from the city hall on Randolph near La Salle street. First he had a newsstand. Then it was a saloon where a stein of beer and an ample, nourishing free lunch could be had for a nickel. Prohibition forced him into the malt and hops business, which made him wealthy.

A Chance Meeting.

"Saturday evening I was standing on Randolph street," Mr. Grein told his 'girls and boys,' yesterday, "when the newly elected mayor spoke to me and asked me if I would do him a favor. I said I could not imagine the new mayor asking little Joe to do him a favor, but I sure would. He said, 'I want you to go up to the city sealer's office and standardize it as you had it 25 years ago. It might be that you will not get any pay.'

"I replied that putting the house in order and helping the new mayor meant more to me than pay."

"And if they need me," he said later, from behind his bower of half a dozen huge baskets of flowers, "why, hell, I'll work indefinitely without pay. We'll have some big bonfires, too."

MORE CITY HALL JOBHOLDERS FALL BEFORE CLEANUP

Hockstein Fired; Busch Cuts Down Force.

Mayor Cermak's new cabinet heads carried on yesterday with the pay roll cleanup among minor noncivil service jobholders of the Thompson administration who survived the wholesale dismissals following the election last week.

Corporation Counsel Busch discharged Henry A. Gano, a special assistant corporation counsel assigned to the city attorney's office, and lopped off five real estate investigators at $1,980 a year. At the same time he announced the names of three lawyers who have agreed to work without pay as special assistant corporation counsels temporarily pending permanent appointments.

HARRY HOCKSTEIN who drew salaries

Three Serve Without Pay.

These attorneys were Francis A. Harper, Paul O'Donnell of the firm Trowbridge, Lowrie, O'Donnell & Johnston, and John W. McCarthy of the firm of Cooke, Sullivan & Ricks.

Harry Hockstein, first deputy city sealer, who has been under fire in the state's attorney's investigation of the city sealer's office under the régime of Dan Serritella, Capone lieutenant, received his walking papers from the new sealer, Joe Grein, who took office yesterday. Grein also fired James Pacelli, a relative of Ald. William V. Pacelli, another deputy.

Commissioner of Public Works Sprague spent the entire day going over the pay rolls and records of the bureau of streets, engineering, sewers, and other divisions of his department. One after another he called in the acting heads of the bureaus and gave them instructions. Several changes in personnel are expected to be announced by him today or tomorrow.

Mrs. Hamilton Still Defiant.

Mrs. Eva Holland Hamilton, chairman of the zoning board of appeals, a Thompson appointee, continued to hold her position in defiance of a message asking her resignation. She said she would preside over a regular board meeting today. Corporation Counsel Busch said that he has not yet had time to study the legality of Mrs. Hamilton's claim that she cannot be fired because she was named for a five year term.

William Farnum Sued for Divorce in West

San Francisco, Cal., April 13.—(AP)—Olive White Farnum, actress, filed a suit for divorce here today against William Farnum, veteran motion picture actor, alleging desertion. Mrs. Farnum says her husband left her May 22, 1928. The Farnums were married in Sag Harbor, N. Y., Dec. 2, 1906. Mrs. Farnum asks for temporary alimony and for division of community property. There are no children.

General Manager

J. R. Hamilton Advertising Agency, Inc.

A man could probably get no better training in modern merchandising and sales promotion than through a position of importance with the Jewel Tea Company, whose diversified lines and direct consumer contact provide an experience that can be obtained in no other way.

Therefore, Mr. Ward with his five year experience with Jewel Tea probably brings to the national advertising field a type of matured experience such as this field seldom secures.

He not only brings to his new work a very thorough knowledge of promotion and distribution costs but also a very careful estimate of returns from practically every form of advertising. In addition to which, his tabulation of millions of consumer contacts automatically gives him a sense of direction in his activities along lines about which most of the merchandising world continues to guess.

Mr. Ward assumes his duties as General Manager of this Advertising Agency April 13.

ALDERMEN MAKE 1933 FAIR PLANS ON MIAMI TRAIN

Mayor Cermak Has Rest on Journey South.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Miami Beach, Fla., April 13.—[Special.]—The World's Fair was the chief topic of discussion today among members of the city council committee on committees at their first meeting, held on the train shortly before arriving here. It was indicated that the city, under Mayor Cermak, will take an active part in the preparations for the 1933 fair.

ALD. S. W. GOVIER.

It was virtually agreed that the duties of the committee on conventions will be broadened to include participation in fair activities. Its name will be changed to World's Fair and conventions committee.

Selection of a chairman and the personnel of the committee is being carefully considered, according to Ald. James B. Bowler [25th], chairman of the steering group, as the mayor will be in close touch with the committee's work and probably will lean upon it to carry out his plans for the city's official participation.

Govier After Chairmanship.

Ald. Sheldon W. Govier [9th], a member of the steering committee, is making a strong bid for the chairmanship. Other names that have been advanced are Ald. Joseph C. Ross [40th], Albert Loescher [44th], and B. A. Cronson [4th].

Although on the same train with the aldermen, but bound for a different destination, Mayor Cermak has not discussed with the steering committee any of its work. Several Democratic politicians, also on the train, are said to have discovered that the mayor was in earnest when he stated that he intends to rest and not to talk politics.

May Combine Committees.

Early discussions of the committee have touched on a plan to combine the track elevation and railway terminals committees under one chairmanship. Several contenders have appeared for the chairmanship, among them Ald. John Toman [22d], who was chairman of the former committee, John J. Hoellen [47th], Joseph Cepak [22d], and Terence Moran [16th].

It was indicated that Ald. William A. Rowan [10th] is likely to be named as chairman of the harbor, wharves, and bridges committee.

Sad Days Are These for What Was Once the Police Quartet

Beneath 5,000 nickel plated stars, pinned on the blue uniform coats of Chicago's 5,000 policemen, 5,000 hearts beat mournfully yesterday for the passing of one of the department's most famous institutions. A curt order of the new city hall régime had put an end to the police quartet.

At a dingy desk in the Des Plaines street station, Sergt. Joseph Murin, second tenor, stared wistfully at the wall and hummed dolefully a strain of "Big Bill the Builder," the quartet's most popular number. Pounding the sidewalks in the Grand Crossing district under a bright April sun, Patrolman William Hazekamp, basso, looked upon a world that was suddenly gray and dreary.

Over in Little Italy, Patrolman Lee Hammersbach stopped to pull a box and report to the East Chicago avenue station. Patrolman Hammersbach's thoughts were far away. He stood, in fancy, on the deck of a Mississippi river steamer, flagship of a flood control expedition, and his baritone floated over the waters.

A Gloomy Day for Him.

At the detective bureau, Patrolman Harry Wheadon sat alone, gloomily. At first tenor, Patrolman Wheadon had taken a leading part in the tuneful heralding of the former mayor's virtues.

"They oughta left them guys together," said a sympathetic policeman. "Look what those guys went through."

"Yes," remarked another, whose sorrow seemed not as deep. "They went through trips to Washington, D. C., a couple trips to the Mardi Gras at New Orleans, a trip to Los Angeles, and a few other excursions. It was sure tough."

The police quartet came into being during the Pageant of Progress in 1922. At the height of the Thompson fame it traveled with him throughout the country, singing of accomplishments of the mayor of Chicago in some thirty states.

Big Times for Quartet.

On the flood control expeditions to New Orleans, the quartet reached its greatest heights. Above the clamor of the joyous flood controllers the singers' voices rose. A Thompson favorite, "The Builder," was warbled. The following was one of the stanzas:

"Who stemmed the flood?
"He stood in mud!
"Big Bill, the builder!"

That Realistic Touch.

And when the party reached the Mississippi lowlands, Thompson, in a happy mood, ordered the quartet to wade into the river and carol the words.

During the last campaign the quartet was summoned to do heroic labor. It was said its members hoped for promotion to sergeancies, but when the civil service lists were posted their names were absent. This omission was one of the causes of Thompson's squabble with the civil service commission, according to one report.

On election night, when the returns were in, showing the Cermak majority, Thompson thanked the quartet and bade them good night.

FORGET POLITICS, DO POLICE WORK, CAPTAINS TOLD

Alcock Transmits Order of Mayor Cermak.

Acting Commissioner John Alcock took action yesterday to divorce the police department from politics. He summoned fifty-four captains to his office and notified them that there would be no rewards or punishments as a result of the election of a new mayor. Instead, he said, every policeman starts a new record in which only efficiency and meritorious conduct will count.

The acting commissioner made it clear that he was carrying out the instructions of Mayor Cermak, instructions which the new mayor gave him when he was informed that he was to carry on as acting commissioner.

"I am relaying the mayor's message to you that henceforth the police department is removed from politics," Alcock informed the captains at the opening of the meeting. "Every member must do his full duty for the citizens of Chicago. Any who fail to do this will not be punished by being transferred; they will go to the trial board.

"Bygones are bygones. I have no grievances against any member of the department, and when I leave the department I expect to be able to look every man in the face and say I did only what was right and just in the supervision of the department. Some of you men here may some day head this department and then you will know that it is a job that requires the utmost in coöperation and the best every man has to give if results are to be accomplished.

"All preventable crime must be stopped. For the past ten months the department has been making an excellent record. We must not only stop crime, but we must apprehend criminals. Our drives against vagrants are to continue. No gambling is to be tolerated and no prostitutes are to be permitted to walk the streets."

Capt. John Ptacek asked:

"What is to be done about your previous order that we are to make no raids without search warrants?"

"I am going to have a conference with the judges and we will try to iron out that situation," Alcock replied. "For the present the policy will be continued of procuring warrants before making raids."

In dismissing the captains Alcock reiterated:

"I have no hard feelings towards any of you and I don't want you to have against me."

Capt. John Ryan, head of the motorcycle division, was instructed to enforce the laws against speeding and make the streets safer for pedestrians and playing children. He was told he would be given fifty additional motorcycles and men to ride them and a systematic effort would be made to reduce automobile accidents.

Two Get Furloughs.

Capts. Michael Hughes and Daniel Gilbert were given ten day furloughs at their own request. Lieut. Albert Mikes was put in charge of the dog pound with especial instructions to safeguard children from dogs during the summer. Alcock then said he intended to make a personal inspection and survey of the detective bureau and carry out Mayor Cermak's orders to see to it that the most deserving are assigned to this form of duty.

Police of the state's attorney's office under command of Sergt. Michael Ahern continued their raiding without warrants in the Des Plaines street district. Last night Assistant State's Attorney Charles Lounsbury sent them on a tour of inspection of places raided within the last few weeks, with instructions to keep the closed places closed. Two arrests were made in the early evening. At 113 South Clinton street John Ryan, 4761 West Monroe street, was seized and at 128 South Canal street the detectives arrested Charles Wilson, who said he was the proprietor of the place.

She replaces energy with food, and, mindful of her lithe figure, she drinks plenty of Welch's. Welch's is quick energy. Welch's is non-fattening. Welch's is health and pep. But more than that, Welch's is a treat to the taste. "The tang of Welch's is inimitable," declares Miss Ulric. "I find it an especially appetizing breakfast fruit course . . . a wonderfully refreshing drink throughout the day."

for abundant vitality

All the world's a stage. And we, to play our parts successfully, need more vitality than most of us have. That's why we need more Welch's, the vitalizing juice of luscious Concord grapes.

Here's a remarkable thing about Welch's. It's so delicious that people used to consider it purely as a social drink. It is. But it's also a fruit. And it's also a food, prepared by Nature for producing quick energy without adding weight.

Whenever you are hot, tired, hungry, thirsty, "drink a bunch of grapes" and see how quickly it tunes you up. Drink Welch's for your breakfast fruit—it's cheaper than fresh fruit. But be sure it IS Welch's—laboratory controlled and pasteurized-pure.

Welch's "by-the-bunch" is now available in the 10c Junior, the new sampler size, convenient for a single serving. It is the concentrated goodness of one and a quarter bunches of full-ripe Concords. Ask for Welch's at leading fountains, hotels, clubs and restaurants. Include it in your diet for one month—then check results. The pint bottle at 30c is most economical for household use. COLDS make handkerchiefs a menace

Kleenex Disposable Tissues

advised by doctors

NOW latest scientific experiments prove that Kleenex, used instead of handkerchiefs, is the safe way to care for colds.

Ordinary handkerchiefs used during colds were tested in laboratories and found to contain as many as 4,170,000 disease germs—over 200,000 when used a single time. This means that when you use handkerchiefs for colds you actually protect these germs in your pocket or handbag—and then carry them back to your face! Self-infection and serious diseases often follow. Kleenex avoids all danger—you use it only once, then discard.

What Kleenex is

Kleenex is a soft, super-absorbent tissue. So inexpensive that you use each tissue only once, then discard. So gentle that irritation is impossible.

You buy Kleenex in Cellophane-sealed packages. Each tissue is as completely sanitary as it looks. Each tissue that touches your face is clean as clean can be.

For beauty

Use Kleenex to remove creams, cosmetics from the face. Its absorbency assures thorough cleansing.

Ask for Kleenex at any drug, dry goods or department store; 20 cents, 30 cents and 50 cents. If you have not tried Kleenex, send for a free trial packet to the Kleenex Company, Lake Michigan Building, Chicago, Illinois.

Bacteriological tests show:

1. That handkerchiefs used by persons having colds may contain as many as 4,170,000 germs per handkerchief. The organisms included are those associated with colds.

2. That organisms associated with colds, when impregnated upon linen and rinsed in boiling water and soap water, were not killed nor appreciably inhibited from growing.

C. A. CHANNELL SUES WIFE; BILL NAMES ENGINEER

Seek Divorce on Grounds of Adultery.

Charles A. Channell, former president of the O'Cedar corporation, yesterday filed suit for divorce in the superior court against Mrs. Amelia P. Channell of Grand Beach, Mich. Through his attorney, George L. Wilson, Channell charges adultery and names L. L. Wise, identified in the bill as an "engineer for the Insull interests."

In addition to setting forth several occasions when Mrs. Channell and Wise are said to have sojourned together, the divorce bill also alleges that on Jan. 7 of this year they rifled a vault in the Channells' summer home at Grand Beach of many valuable securities belonging to Channell. An injunction is asked to restrain them from disposing of these securities.

Separated on Jan. 3.

The Channells were married on Nov. 1, 1903, and separated, according to the bill, last Jan. 3. They have two grown children, Emily, and Edward C. Channell, also a former official of the O'Cedar corporation, who was divorced by his wife on grounds of cruelty and drunkenness in August of 1929.

The bill says that Mrs. Channell met Wise in the fall of 1927. In an effort to break up the affair, Channell avers, he sent his wife to Europe, where she remained several months, spending more than $10,000. She returned to this country secretly, the bill avers, and instead of notifying her husband she cabled Wise, who met her in New York and drove her back to Chicago. They stopped at several hotels on the motor trip, Channell alleges.

Tells of Trip Together.

Channell says that when he expressed indignation over his wife's actions she promised to stop seeing Wise. Six months later, however, the bill states, Mrs. Channell and Wise spent July 3 and 4, 1930, at a hotel in Hoopeston, Ill. Subsequently she has entertained Wise frequently at the Channell apartment at 180 East Delaware place, according to the bill. On Jan. 3 Mrs. Channell is alleged to have left the apartment, telling her husband that she would never return.

The bill alleges that since discovering his wife's affair with Wise, Channell has been depressed, has lost control of many of his business interests and now is comparatively poor. In trying to recoup his losses Channell promoted a club at Grand Beach and lost an additional $60,000, according to the bill.

$200,000 Spent on Home.

The home at Grand Beach was built at a cost of $200,000, Channell avers, and when he attempted to mortgage the property to provide himself with funds, he learned that his wife had in some way gained title to the property and refuses now to return it to him.

Too much money was the cause of the break in their marital life, Channell says in the bill. At the time of their marriage he was earning $12,000 a year, most of which he gave to his wife, he says. When he prospered and became head of the O'Cedar corporation he increased his wife's allowance to $4,000 a week, the bill says.

Wife Changes Attitude.

When the depression hit the market and his earnings were reduced, Channell says, his wife changed her attitude toward him. It was about that time that she became acquainted with Wise.

Channell is 57 years old. Two years ago he was sued for $100,000 by Miss Ruth Tromley, 23 years old, a former model, for breach of promise. The suit was dropped several months later and it was reported that a settlement had been arranged out of court.

Channell is a member of the Lake Shore Athletic club, where he is now living, the Hamilton, South Shore Country, and Riding clubs in Chicago, the Stoke Poges club of England and several clubs in France.

FORBIDS CITY TO CUT OFF VILLAGE WATER SUPPLY

Circuit Judge Ralph J. Dady issued a temporary injunction at Waukegan yesterday forbidding the city of Highland Park to put into effect a threat to cut off the water supply of the village of Deerfield.

In 1914 Deerfield entered into a contract with Highland Park under which it was to pay the latter city 9 cents per hundred cubic feet for water. In November, 1929, Highland Park demanded a rate of 15 cents per hundred cubic feet, which Deerfield declined to pay. Since that time the village has been paying 9 cents and Highland Park has been charging, but not getting, an additional 6 cents.

The matter came to a crisis last week, when Deerfield was notified that unless it paid arrears of $6,396 at once the water supply would be cut off yesterday.

AMAZING STORY OF DISCOVERIES IN ZUTA VAULT

Find Crime-Politics Link During Lingle Inquiry.

Tenth installment of "The Solution of the Lingle Murder."

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

CHAPTER XI.

For all his bawdiness of character, Jack Zuta was a methodical sort, and painstakingly he recorded the fruits of his labors and saw to it that his balances weighed on the profit side.

There was also a strain of the Shylock in Jack Zuta and a will to see that favors he performed for people were repaid with interest, and with native craftiness he preserved the evidences of such favors. An eye to the future, Zuta's.

For years in Chicago the prevailing cry of the better class of citizens, the constant demand of civic associations, was a divorcement of politics from crime. This alliance was damned a thousand times; it became the leading campaign issue.

Inquiries Prove Fruitless.

That the alliance existed there seemed little doubt, but of actual evidences of a partnership of politicians and criminals there had been so little. Grand juries had plumbed the depths so many times, with paltry success, and special investigations, launched in high hopes, generally ended without definite proof being shown.

The fates chose Jack Zuta, from the criminal side of the alliance, to bequeath to the public some proof of the workings of the infamous union.

Zuta had saved, through his years of crime, a fulsome grist of canceled checks, promissory notes, letters, and other papers, evidencing his relations with politicians, judges, policemen, legislators, and men of other walks of life.

When these were exposed to the public by Pat Roche and Charles Rathbun during their investigation of the murder of Alfred Lingle, Chicago enjoyed a nine day sensation. Public officials came tumbling into the offices of the Lingle investigators, explaining how their names came in the Zuta papers; why they took Zuta's money, and how innocent they all were.

An Accident of Death.

Zuta did not choose to play the public benefactor in death, and had he not died a violent death, had he been given time to adjust his affairs, the scandal undoubtedly would never have been exposed. Zuta most likely had preserved these mementoes of his transactions with the so-called upper crust of the political world of Chicago, guarding against a time of need.

Soon after the murder of Zuta, Investigator Roche learned from one of his seemingly inexhaustible sources that Zuta had cached away, in safe deposit boxes scattered in various vaults and in trunks and suitcases hidden away securely, the records of his gang operations. The investigator thought it possible the records might provide a clew to the Lingle murder.

A quiet inquiry revealed to Roche that Zuta, under aliases, had maintained a deposit box in the Capitol building vaults, 159 North State street, and another in the vaults of the American Bond and Mortgage company, 127 North Dearborn street.

Zuta's Deposit Boxes Opened.

The first box was opened on Aug. 14 in the presence of representatives of Attorney General Carlstrom, Coroner Bundesen, and the public administrator's office, and it was found crammed full of documents. The other was opened by authority of a search warrant issued secretly by Judge John H. Lyle, and it yielded some gold coins and a number of additional documents.

While an examination of the seized papers was being conducted no announcement of the find was made, but on the following day some of the records were released to the public by Rathbun and Roche, and later all were given out.

The roster of the names found in the Zuta boxes showed a great variety of personages—a judge, a former judge, the brother of a judge; two former state senators; policeman, a former chief deputy coroner, a suburban chief of police, the city editor of the Chicago Daily News, the assistant business manager of the Chicago board of education, an alderman, gangsters living and gangsters murdered, a representative of a Hearst newspaper syndicate, and many others.

There was also a variety of ways in which these men had come to find representation in the canny vice monger's collection of souvenirs, and these, with the persons mentioned, are discussed herewith.

THE JUDGE'S STORY

Judge Joseph Schulman, for many years a member of the Municipal bench, was found to have received checks from Zuta, and to have issued notes, signed by himself and indorsed in blank, which were found, unpaid, in Zuta's effects.

The total amount of the notes and checks upon which Judge Schulman's name appeared was $5,800. Some checks, issued by Schulman and indorsed by Zuta, were found to have been returned by Schulman's bank, marked "payment stopped."

Judge Schulman appeared to explain his transactions with Zuta, and he declared that shortly after his election to the bench he was in need of funds, and appealed to a lawyer, Maurice I. Green, who had taken over Schulman's suite of law offices.

Green offered to take Schulman's notes and have them discounted, according to the judge, who said that Green had given the notes, without Schulman's knowledge, to Jack Zuta.

Schulman Is Questioned.

The judge was asked how he could fail to know that the money was Zuta's, inasmuch as Zuta issued checks for the amount of the loans, payable to Schulman, and indorsed by the judge. He said he had paid no attention to the signature on the check, but had simply put them through his bank.

Neither did the judge remember the circumstances of a check for $500, issued by him and made payable to Zuta, upon which payment had been stopped.

The lawyer, Green, said he recalled having obtained a loan for Judge Schulman from Zuta, and he said that when Zuta had complained that the judge's check, in payment of one of the loans, had been returned by Schulman's bank, he had paid Zuta, and had been repaid himself by the judge.

A Zuta check for $250, dated April 4, 1923, was made payable to and was indorsed by Emanuel Eller, who in that year was elected to the Municipal court, and later was elected to the Superior Court of Cook county. Eller, son of Morris Eller, boss of the "bloody 20th ward," in which so many turbulent election scenes have been enacted, declared that he had no recollection of the check, and that it must have been a campaign contribution collected by one of his workers.

Checks to Former Senator.

On the same date a check for $500 was given by Zuta to George Van Lent, former state senator and a Thompson follower, and four years later Van Lent received another check, for $100, both payments being evidently campaign contributions.

Two checks of Zuta, made payable to cash, one for $500 and the other for $100, were indorsed by Louis L. Fisher, brother of Judge Harry M. Fisher of the Circuit court. Fisher, who had been an assistant state's attorney during the term of Prosecutor Robert E. Crowe, admitted that the indorsements were his signatures, but he declared he had no recollection of the manner in which he obtained the checks.

At one time Fisher was one of the attorneys representing various dog track enterprises, but he denied having been counsel for the Zuta-Moran-Aiello dog track, known as the Fairview Kennel club.

Richard I. Williams, a sergeant of police who had been assigned as an investigator for the sol disant reformer, Albert R. Brunker, was found to have signed a note, uncovered in Zuta's box, for $600. Williams denied he got the money from Zuta, and asserted he had made a loan for that sum from a man named Messe. The policeman admitted that he had never repaid the loan, but that he "had been ready to."

Letter from Police Chief.

Then the prosecutors revealed a letter, preserved for so many months by the guileful Zuta, which was written on the stationery of the Evanston police department. It was undated, and read as follows:

"Dear Jack: I am temporarily in need of four 'C's' for a couple of months. Can you let me have it? The bearer does not know what it is, so put it in an envelope and seal it and address it to me.

"Your old pal,
"BILL FREEMAN."

William O. Freeman, chief of police of Evanston was questioned by Mr. Rathbun and finally admitted that he had written the letter. The four "C's" represented $400, it was explained, but Chief Freeman said the amount of the loan he had obtained from the pander was $300.

Chief Freeman Keeps Job.

On the day after he was questioned Freeman said he had repaid all but $10 of the loan, which he said he had negotiated shortly after being appointed chief at Evanston. He was in urgent need of funds on account of having moved his home from Chicago to Evanston, Freeman said.

For a week the city of Evanston was in a turmoil over the disclosure, and the mayor and city council met to consider their police chief's future usefulness. Then Mayor Charles H. Bartlett announced that an investigation had satisfied him and the councilmen that the Freeman loan was for a legitimate purpose, and that the chief would be retained in office. He expressed confidence in Freeman's ability and integrity.

EDITOR CRAIG'S CHECK

Another sensation followed the exposure of a check for $50, signed by John Craig, city editor of the Chicago Daily News, which was found in Zuta's box. The check, dated April 22, 1928, was written on a blank issued by Zuta's bank, the West Town State, and the name of that bank had been scratched out, with the name of the Wilmette State bank written in its place.

The check, made payable to cash, had never been paid. Craig was summoned for questioning, and admitted that he had written the check.

"I was at the Liberty inn, which is at Ashland avenue and Madison street, and I wanted to cash a check," Craig stated. "Zuta was there and he agreed to cash it for me, and did. After a month or so I noticed the check did not come through the bank, so I inquired about it from Zuta. He said the matter was all right. I replied I did not do business in that way, and I gave him the cash. I asked him for my check and he said he had torn it up."

Asked how he came to use a check issued by Zuta's bank, Mr. Craig replied that the blank checks had been available at the Liberty inn, which he said he understood had been owned by the gangster. Investigators had previously disclosed that Craig had no account in the Wilmette bank, but the Daily News city editor explained that the account was in his wife's name, and that he occasionally used it. This was later verified by the bank officials.

Further investigation revealed that the Liberty Inn, a cabaret in which Zuta maintained an interest with several notorious police characters, one of whom was murdered in a gang outbreak, had been permanently closed and padlocked by federal court decree three months prior to the date of the Craig check.

The government had closed the cabaret for violations of the prohibition law, on Jan. 19, 1926, whereas the date of the check which Craig said he cashed in the place was April 22, 1926. Later Craig, in a letter to Prosecutor Rathbun, said he had canceled checks to show he had twice cashed checks at the Liberty Inn, and that, while he thought the check in question also was cashed there, it might have been cashed in another café in which Zuta was interested.

Former State Senator Harry W. Starr, lawyer, assemblyman, former city prosecutor and election commissioner, was found to have received two checks from Zuta, each for $200. Starr explained that they were in payment of legal services rendered by Starr in connection with a judgment obtained against Zuta by an individual injured in an automobile accident. He described the nature of the litigation, and pointed out that at the time he had not been employed in any public office.

Official's Name on Papers.

A check for $150, made payable to Nate De Lue, assistant business manager for the board of education, brought the explanation from De Lue that he had known Zuta for many years, and that he had indorsed the check for Zuta so that it could be cashed at De Lue's bank. De Lue's name was also found affixed, as a notary public, to deeds and other papers in Zuta's boxes, and letters were found addressed to Zuta in care of De Lue.

Shades of gangsters who had died by the gun were summoned by the disclosures from the Zuta boxes, checks being found cashed by Tony Lombardo, murdered king of Chicago's "Little Italy"; "Diamond Joe" Esposito, slain café owner and Deneen political leader, and others.

The letters of "One Gangster to Another" were found, they having been written to Zuta by Louis La Cava, a hoodlum formerly of the ranks of Capone, who had been banished by Capone and was hiding in New York. He pleaded his prowess as a gangster with Zuta, and sought to have the boss of the north side gangsters enlist him, La Cava, in his service so they might lead an assault upon the territory of Capone.

Campaign Gift, His Story.

Paul W. Rothenberg, chief deputy coroner in a previous administration, who was ousted when Dr. Herman N. Bundesen was elected coroner, was found to have received a check from Zuta in the sum of $500, and he asserted this must have been a campaign contribution.

Picture postcards, exhibiting Ald. George Maypole and members of his family at Hot Springs, Ark., were found in the Zuta boxes, addressed to the gangster with the salutation "Greetings from the Maypoles." The alderman said it had long been his annual custom to send the cards to more than a thousand residents of his ward.

Correspondence, including several telegrams, was found tending to show, upon investigation, that an effort had been made to interest Zuta in a proposed gambling venture in Miami, Fla. A gambler at Gary, Ind., named in the correspondence, told investigators that he had conceived the idea of starting a gambling house in Miami, and that he sought to have Zuta provide the capital.

Investigate Gambling Prospects.

The gambler, Frank Gross, went with Benjamin J. Laube, a lawyer and former justice of the peace of Gary, to Florida, to investigate the prospects.

One of the letters, evidently written by Laube, was on the stationery of the International News Service, a Hearst organization, and it referred to the efforts of his son in attempting to reach Gov. Doyle Carleton, Attorney General Fred H. Davis, and Senator John Watson on the matter involved. Laube's son was identified as J. L. Laube, former Florida bureau manager for the Hearst International News Service, with headquarters at Orlando.

GANG FINANCES BARED

The Zuta gang dealt in big money, it was revealed, as for the first time in the history of the gangs a concise balance sheet, neatly typed and showing the profits and losses of the gang's gambling racket, was presented for general inspection. The names of the gambling houses, of the places in which slot machines had been installed by the gang, and of the gang's collectors, all were listed.

Some of the items in the account were identified by initials or first names, as, for example, there appeared "George M." for George Moran; "B. B." for Barney Bertoch; "Jack" for Zuta himself.

Unfortunately, this evidence and other documents in the Zuta files could not be used as the basis for criminal prosecutions, since all of it was dated prior to the opening of 1928, and the statute of limitations, which sets a definite time limit during which prosecutions must be begun, precluded action against those involved.

A WHOLESOME EFFECT

Nevertheless, the exposure of Zuta's political and criminal machinations and of the men with whom he dealt had a signal and wholesome effect upon public affairs.

The gang account was headed to indicate it was for the "period ending Nov. 12 inclusive," and while it did not indicate when that period began, investigation proved it was for one week.

The receipts summed up reached the sizable total of $429,046 and the net profits were $75,135. This would seem, to the average financier, to show a large overhead, but this was partly explained when the officials came to interpret the meaning of the characters "M. K."

One entry in the record read, "M. K., dividends, $80,693." In a record for a similar period headed, "Dividends Paid Out," the same initials of "M. K." appeared with sums opposite the initials ranging from $1,500 to $5,000. Ten such items aggregated $27,775. It was plain from the records that these entries covered a short period and in this time "M. K." received a total of $108,468.

Politician Is Revealed.

Investigation satisfied Roche that "M. K." was Matt Kolb, a former employé in the ice company of Charles E. Graydon, who was then sheriff of Cook county. Kolb had branched out in the beer running trade, then he became a politician of sorts and he went in for establishing gambling houses and seeing to it that they were protected from interference.

He had allied himself with the Zuta-Aiello-Moran gang and became the generalissimo and fixer of the slot machine racket. It was learned that he had boasted of his influence with Sheriff Graydon and that he took advantage of his acquaintance with the sheriff to force roadhouse keepers to deal in the north siders' brand of beer and to install the gang's slot machines.

Former Sheriff Graydon declared he had had no dealings with Kolb, and as for another exhibit from the Zuta box, a "courtesy" card issued by the sheriff calling upon all his deputies to extend the courtesies of the office to "J. Zuta." Graydon declared he did not know Zuta, that the card must have been issued through some friend of his.

Gift to Thompson Crowd.

The direct link between politics and crime was forged in the discovery of a canceled check of Zuta's, made payable to the "Regular Republican club of Cook county," in the sum of $500. This is the city hall organization which gave support to William Hale Thompson.

Many other proofs that Zuta was one of Thompson's most devoted supporters were forthcoming. A card was found, reading as follows:

Membership Card No. 772. 1927-8.
Jack Zuta
William Hale Thompson Republican Club
America First—Farm Relief
Inland Waterways—Flood Control
Homer K. Galpin, Chairman

There was also a paper showing that Zuta had contributed to the "victory cruise" of Mayor Thompson and had accompanied the mayor and his followers to New Orleans. These evidences led to further investigations and there were reports that Thompson had accepted Zuta's invitation to a gala celebration in Zuta's honor at Middlesboro, Ky., the home of Zuta's uncle.

Tells of Zuta's Ambition.

Zuta's ambition to rise to power through Thompson was told some months later by Starr, the former state senator, who had on occasions represented Zuta in legal matters. Starr described a conversation with Zuta held during the mayoralty campaign of 1927.

"Zuta told me he was busy politically," said Starr, testifying in an action in the Probate court concerning the Zuta estate. "He said he was forming an organization to support Thompson, that he expected to be a power in politics, and that he was going hook, line, and sinker for Thompson because Thompson would do the same for him."

DIABETES CURBED BY NEW METHOD

Sufferers Report Amazing Relief Through "Kidney Laxative" Discovery

New Way to Eliminate Poison Wastes Increases Sugar Tolerance

"I have been suffering from sugar diabetes for several years," writes Al E. Smith of 3923 Wallace St. "I continued to lose weight, so nervous I could scream, and couldn't sleep much. I had boils and my kidneys were in terrible shape. About three months ago a friend spoke of your 'Sleepy Water.' Almost immediately I got results and began feeling better. My nerves settled, I can sleep, and my eruptions are gone."

Doctors are now prescribing a wonderful natural poison eliminator, known as Sleepy Water. They often describe it as a "kidney laxative." It is to be had from only one source—a pair of twin springs in the Arkansas hills. Peculiar natural forces here inject certain mineral combinations which are not to be found in any other water. These natural alkalines neutralize and absorb the acid poisons and body wastes which so often cause and aggravate diabetes. By gently soothing and activating the kidneys, Sleepy Water also speeds up the elimination of these poisons. Not only diabetes sufferers but victims of rheumatism, high blood pressure, arthritis and 25 other serious common diseases report amazing relief, due to Sleepy Water's unique powers.

Tear out and mail the coupon now for particulars of the wonderful thirty-minute test that will demonstrate to you how Sleepy Water works to drive out poisons and purify blood. Let us tell you how you can make this thirty-minute test. If you prefer, simply phone Kedzie 1228, the Chewaukla Mineral Springs Co., 3330 W. Jackson Boulevard, Chicago.

873 FRIGIDAIRES FOR REALTY & MORTGAGE COMPANY BUILDINGS

Over four years ago the first order for Frigidaires was received from the Realty and Mortgage Company to equip apartments then under construction in new building developments on the Northwest side. Since that time this important organization of apartment house owners and operators has practically standardized on Frigidaire for each new building and has also modernized many other previously constructed apartments with Frigidaires.

According to Mr. Oscar D. Sehnert, Vice President of the Realty and Mortgage Company, Frigidaire was selected over all other makes of automatic refrigerators because it more nearly fulfilled the ideal of household refrigeration.

Mr. Sehnert declared recently: "Our experience with Frigidaire has been most satisfactory. In standardizing upon Frigidaire we were influenced to some considerable extent by the preference of our tenants. Our records show that we have purchased to date 873 Frigidaires and because Frigidaire has maintained a steady policy of progress . . . leading the refrigeration industry in quietness of operation, uninterrupted service and exclusive features, we shall undoubtedly purchase more Frigidaires as the need arises."

HUNT TALKATIVE THIEF IN RAID ON OAK PARK HOME

Bandits Bind Women; Get $5,458 in Gems.

Chicago and suburban police joined last night in a hunt for a talkative bandit and his partner, who forced their way into the home of Harold C. Lewis, 950 Columbian avenue, Oak Park, bound and gagged his wife, Georgia, and a colored maid, and departed with jewelry valued at $5,458. Mr. Lewis, who is president of the Cyrus Electrical school, 500 South Paulina street, was at his office at the time.

When the maid, Lulu Woodward, answered their ring at the front door the robbers drew revolvers, brushed her aside and strode into the vestibule, from where they covered Mrs. Lewis, who was standing on the upper landing of the stairs above. Then they marshaling the maid in front of them they climbed the stairs and forced mistress and maid into a bedroom, where they commanded Mrs. Lewis to lie on the bed with her face buried in pillows and the maid to crawl beneath the bed.

Robber Is Talkative.

Thus secure from recognition, they leisurely rifled the bedroom for the next twenty minutes, picking up a diamond ring valued at $2,068, a necklace worth $3,250, and a small diamond ring worth $150, one robber keeping up a running fire of chatter. "A nice home you have here," he remarked to Mrs. Lewis, who is 32 years old. "You have very good taste, I must say. Perhaps I'll come back for another visit some time. Do you think you'd recognize me?"

From the depths of the pillows came her stifled reply in the negative. She was concerned, Mrs. Lewis said afterwards, not about the loss of her jewelry, but for the safety of her 2 year old daughter, at play in the back yard. The voluble robber continued his chatter.

"Nice stones, these are," he observed. "It's a shame you have to lose them. But I'm sure your husband won't have his pretty wife without jewelry. He'll buy you more."

Tells "Why" He's There.

"I don't think he will," she retorted with spirit. "Times are pretty hard. Money and jewels aren't growing on trees."

"Right you are, madam," said the robber. "That's why we're here. If times weren't hard we might be working."

Their search finished, the pair muzzled their faces with handkerchiefs, bound and gagged mistress and maid with adhesive tape, and walked out. Mrs. Lewis unloosed her hands in time to see them driving off in an old flivver sedan.

In a similar robbery in the Rogers Park district an armed pair walked into the kitchen of the apartment of James K. Fling, an advertising executive of 1427 Howard street, held up his wife and her guest, Mrs. Charles Herenden Jr., 5737 Kenmore avenue, and made off with Mrs. Herenden's jewelry, valued at $6,250. Accepting Mrs. Fling's word that she possessed no jewelry, they departed without searching the house.

ROBBED OF GEMS IN HOME

Mrs. Harold C. Lewis and her two children, William and Virginia. Robbers were in possession of her Oak Park home for 45 minutes, during which Mrs. Lewis and her maid were bound and taped and Mrs. Lewis robbed of gems valued at $5,458.

DRY REPEAL VETO STIRS UP STORM IN LEGISLATURE

Liberals See G. O. P. Doom; Drys Praise Act.

state finds himself in such a position that he cannot consistently follow the will of the people as decidedly expressed through the ballot box, and, further, when he finds it necessary to repudiate his party, he should resign. His action in vetoing the will of the people was no surprise to me.

"Last November the people decidedly voted against a state income tax. Tomorrow morning, you will find in the senate the governor's forces united to pass an income tax bill."

Representative Howard L. Doyle [Dem., Decatur] said: "Without reading the text of Gov. Emmerson's veto message, I am at a loss to understand his inconsistency if party platforms mean anything."

Representative O'Grady [Dem., Chicago], sponsor of the repeal bill in the house, declared that the veto was no surprise to him. He charged the governor with solicitation of votes in the senate against the bill.

"Gov. Emmerson personally solicited one senator to vote against the bill and used his influence in an attempt to get others," he said. "He has repudiated the vote of more than one million persons."

Snell Insists It's Selfish.

Representative Truman A. Snell [Dem., Carlinville], long a dry leader and now a liberal who voted for the repealer, declared the position taken by the governor was selfish and partisan and apparently directed at a hope of running as a vice presidential candidate in 1932 with Hoover on a prohibition platform. "He has by his veto overridden the people, his party and both branches of the general assembly," said Representative Snell.

Some of the Republicans professed to see the hand of the Hoover administration in the killing of the repealer. At the recent John Erikson day dinner here, the governor extolled President Hoover. Since then vague reports have been floating around that the governor is being talked of in inner circles as a possible running mate for Hoover in 1932.

One idea broached tonight is to take the McDermott repealer bill, which still is in the senate—it is a replica of the O'Grady bill which passed—attach a 1932 referendum clause, and pass it. In his message the governor said if the repealer had a referendum clause he "should feel compelled to sign."

The house liberals, however, tonight do not appear to be kindly disposed to a referendum. Liberals point out that Illinois has already voted three times on the wet and dry question in referenda.

2 Repealers Passed in House.

Three times a repealer was passed by the house and then stopped by the senate and this time, backed by the November referendum and the Democratic landslide which gave James Hamilton Lewis a plurality of 744,000, for senator, the senate, traditionally dry, voted for the repeal bill.

"The bill has only one purpose," says the governor's message. "That is to hinder and thwart and make impossible the efforts of the federal government to execute the 18th amendment and thereby compel the substitution for it of some other system.

"This is not the orderly and legal method for securing this change. It smacks more of lawlessness and rebellion.

"The million voters who favored the public policy question expressed their dissatisfaction with present conditions. They did not, however, in my opinion, approve this method of correcting them. Illinois must stand with the federal government and the supreme law of the land."

Senator Richard R. Means [Rep., Ashkum] said the veto was the only course the governor could pursue without running counter to the United States constitution.

As to the paragraph in the veto message that the state platform was only a pledge for action to be taken by members of congress, the liberals tonight are asking what action congress could take on repeal of the state prohibition law which was one of the three proposals submitted to popular vote at the instance of Republican state convention.

Tice Applauds Veto.

Representative Homer J. Tice [Rep., Greenview], chairman of the house appropriations committee, who has been a dry floor leader throughout the long years that he has served in the assembly, lauded the veto action.

Governorship politics began working towards the foreground on the heels of the veto on the Republican side. Gov. Emmerson has been accounted a probable contender for reelection, although has made no announcement. His foremost opponent is Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom. He made no comments on the veto.

As affairs are breaking the politicians expect Emmerson to run in the primaries as a dry and Carlstrom as a liberal. Other entrants are looked for. Len Small was expected to have been a candidate if Mayor Thompson was reelected mayor, but Tuesday's election of Mayor A. J. Cermak by 194,000, may have sidetracked Small, although the remnants of the city hall are still speaking of him.

On the Democratic side, among the possible candidates mentioned are Michael L. Igoe of Chicago minority leader and national committeeman, Bruce Campbell of East St. Louis and William H. Dietrich of Beardstown, congressmen at large.

TEXT OF VETO MESSAGE BY GOV. EMMERSON

Springfield, Ill., April 13.—(AP)—The text of Gov. Emmerson's veto message on the Illinois dry repeal bill follows:

"To the honorable the house of representatives:

"I return herewith without my approval house bill No. 1, a bill for an act to repeal certain acts therein named.

"The purpose of this bill is to repeal the Illinois prohibition act and the so-called search and seizure act. Its effect would be to leave Illinois, for the first time in its history, without any state law for the control or regulation of intoxicating beverages. It attempts to nullify the provisions of the eighteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States so far as the state of Illinois is concerned.

Always Has Been Combated.

"This state has always recognized the need for regulation or control of traffic in intoxicating liquor. From the beginning of organized government in Illinois there were laws on the subject and the liquor traffic has been restricted with constantly increasing stringency of legislation culminating in 1874 in the dramshop act. State laws regulated the sale of intoxicating liquor both within and outside the limits of cities, towns, and villages; prohibited the sale of intoxicating liquor to minors, near homes for disabled volunteer soldiers, or within 4 miles of the state university, and prohibited the admission of minors to dance halls where intoxicating liquor was sold. In 1907 the local option law was adopted, giving the people in cities, towns, and villages the right to create by popular vote anti-saloon territory to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquor.

"This group of laws was in force when the 18th amendment was made a part of the federal constitution and the two acts which this bill seeks to repeal were enacted in order to make effective within the state of Illinois the provisions of that amendment.

No Control Left.

"The Supreme court of this state has said that the Illinois prohibition act was a revision of the whole subject under the amendment to the federal constitution and was intended as a substitute for and to repeal all existing laws on that subject. The statutes of this state provide 'No act or part of an act repealed by the general assembly shall be deemed to be revived by the repeal of the repealing act.'

"It is apparent, therefore, that house bill No. 1 would remove from the statutes all those laws on this subject and the serious consequences of such a situation cannot be ignored by any thoughtful citizen. The police, sheriffs, constables, and other law enforcing officers, numbering tens of thousands, could not, under state law, interfere with the sale of liquor to school children, the operation of stills and dramshops near schools and colleges, or any others trafficking in intoxicants.

"The only protection from these evils would be the activities of a comparatively few federal agents, unless some measure of power remains in municipalities by ordinance, but this would necessarily be weak and ineffective.

"It is contended by the proponents of this bill that the sole purpose of the Illinois prohibition act and the so-called search and seizure act is the enforcement of the provisions of the eighteenth amendment to the federal constitution, and that if the people of Illinois are not in sympathy with that amendment they have a right to withdraw cooperation in such enforcement.

"Without questioning the sovereign right of the people, I would like to point out that all civil officers in Illinois are required, before entering upon the duties of their respective offices, to take and subscribe to an oath 'to support the constitution of the United States.' One of the provisions of that constitution vests in congress and the several states concurrent power to enforce the eighteenth amendment.

"This became a part of the constitution of the United States on Jan. 29, 1919. The fiftv-first general assembly of this state ratified it on Jan. 14, 1919. That same general assembly indefinitely accepted for the state of Illinois the joint responsibility of enforcement and exercised the concurrent jurisdiction by the enactment of the so-called search and seizure act. Two years later the passage of the Illinois prohibition act was a continuation of that acceptance. It is now proposed that this responsibility and jurisdiction shall be relinquished and that this portion of the constitution of the United States shall not be supported.

Hits Unity of Government.

"It is quite evident to me that the repeal of these acts is not a mere gesture of disapproval of prohibition, as some would have it appear, but tends to strike at the fundamental unity of national government under the federal constitution. I am not for nullification. Destructive principles which do not protect the lives and homes of all our citizens will not afford the solution of the liquor problem. I do not believe that such a serious step as the complete repeal of state regulation should be taken without the unequivocal and understanding approval of the voters of the state, expressed after full consideration of all of the consequences.

"It was frequently asserted during the pendency of this bill in the legislature, and has been urged since its passage, that there is a mandate from the people demanding its enactment. At the election on Nov. 4, 1930, three questions of public policy were submitted to the voters — repeal of the eighteenth amendment, modification of the Volstead act, and repeal of the Illinois prohibition act. The vote on these questions was approximately one million for and something over a half million against.

Many Neglected to Vote.

"Taken at its face value, this vote seems to indicate an overwhelming majority in favor of the repeal of the Illinois prohibition act. Of course, it is to be remembered that the number of votes in favor of the repeal of the prohibition act was less than a majority of all those who voted in the election by some 106,000 and that it is only about one-third of the total number of voters in Illinois who voted in the presidential election in November, 1928. It is true that the leader of the organization which assumes the authority to speak for the 'dry' voters of the state, through what I believe was mistaken judgment, urged those opposed to these public policy questions not to vote, and doubtless many were influenced by this advice and did not vote on the questions.

"It is not my purpose, however, to quibble over whether or not this public policy referendum was a true expression of the so called 'wets' and 'dry' sentiment of the state. In my opinion, a majority of the thinking people of this state are dissatisfied with the conditions in this country which have followed the eighteenth amendment and the enforcement acts under it.

Against Wiping Out All.

"But I am equally satisfied that the American people do not want and will not attempt the correction of these evils by wiping out all regulatory liquor regulations. This is unthinkable, but it is the principle of this repeal bill.

"If the eighteenth amendment and its attendant legislation through ineffectiveness produced the bootlegger, the speakeasy, and the illicit still, surely these and other evils cannot be destroyed by wiping out all state restraint. We cannot cure individual disregard for law by state disregard for the federal constitution.

"No sincere advocate of this bill holds this opinion. It has only one purpose. That is to hinder and thwart and make impossible the efforts of the federal government to execute the eighteenth amendment and thereby compel the substitution for it of some other system. This is not the orderly and legal method for securing this change. It smacks more of lawlessness and rebellion. The million voters of Illinois who favored the public policy questions expressed their dissatisfaction with present conditions. They did not, however, in my opinion, approve this method of correcting them. Illinois must stand with the federal government and the supreme law of the land.

As to Party Promise.

"The argument has been made that the Republican party of Illinois in its 1930 convention platform pledged itself and its candidates for office to abide by the decision of the voters at this referendum, and that because of this pledge I, as a Republican, should sign this bill. This argument is based upon a distorted statement of fact. The pledge of the Republican party, as stated in the platform itself, neither justifies nor warrants such action on my part.

"The platform distinctly states that the referendum is upon 'the question of the eighteenth amendment to the constitution and the problems of enforcement involved thereunder.' The question of the repeal of the Illinois prohibition act was submitted as a part of a program embracing three questions. The first involved the repeal of the eighteenth amendment; the second, the modification of the Volstead act; and the third, the repeal of the Illinois prohibition act.

"It was manifestly the thought of the framers of the platform that these questions were not to be accepted separately but as a complete program and it was not their belief that the state of Illinois should attempt to nullify the constitution by withdrawing its support from the federal laws previous to their repeal or modification.

Nation Action Precedes.

"This is clearly stated in the platform when it says that 'the Republican party . . . has been the steadfast champion of the sanctity of the constitution and observance of the laws as they have been decreed by the bill of the people . . . and pledges its continued unqualified support of the provisions of the constitution and the laws of our nation and state unless and until they are repealed or amended.'

"The intent that nation action should precede state action is further shown by the fact that the platform did not pledge members of the legislature to vote or work for the repeal of the Illinois prohibition act, but did pledge 'its representatives in the congress of the United States to vote consistently to carry out fully the expressed will of the people of their districts at the referendum on the questions' — the platform speaks for itself. There is no word or suggestion of a pledge or instruction to the governor of this state, or to the general assembly of this state.

"There is only the pledge for action to be taken by members of the congress of the United States at Washington. The person who reads into this platform a mandate to repeal our state liquor laws while the federal constitution and statutes remain as they are has, in my judgment, misconstrued plain and unmistakable language.

"Voters Misunderstood."

"Furthermore, I am satisfied that, like the Republican state convention, the voters in voting on these three public policy questions did not anticipate that the Illinois prohibition act would be repealed prior to national action on the eighteenth amendment or the Volstead act. They voted on the entire program, not on the adoption of the last proposal first.

"It has been said that the action of the general assembly in passing this bill constituted another mandate which I must obey. Those who so contend disregard the constitutional principles which make the executive an integral part of the lawmaking machinery. I do not believe that an act of the general assembly should be lightly vetoed because the executive differs in opinion with a majority of that body. The veto power is given to the governor to exercise when he is satisfied of the unwisdom of the course taken by the legislative body. He fails in his constitutional duty if he hesitates to make use of it when he is convinced that the action of the legislature is detrimental to the interest and welfare of the people of the state. The passage of a legislative bill is not a mandate enforcing executive approval.

"No Referendum Provision."

"But this does not mean that this check or counterbalance of the veto is to be exercised against the will of the people. It is still true, and will continue to be true, that this is a government of and by the people. If this bill contained a referendum provision so that the people of this state, with a full knowledge of the consequence, could vote on the wiping out of all state liquor legislation without regard to the constitution of the United States, I should feel compelled to sign the bill. But its proponents have refused to permit it to secure this high authority.

"For the reasons I have stated I feel it to be my duty as governor of the state of Illinois to veto and withhold my approval from this bill."

MARSHAL SHOT TRYING TO TAKE LIQUOR SUSPECT

Thayer, Mo., April 13.—[Special.]—City Marshal A. W. Pease, 47, was shot and probably fatally wounded today when he and Oregon county officials went to arrest Fielding Vogan, 27, wanted on a charge of selling liquor. Vogan is held under guard in a hotel here. He told officials he was too ill to be moved to jail. No charges have been filed against Vogan pending outcome of the marshal's injuries.

Two Shot by Dry Agent.

Waterville, Me., April 13.—(AP)—Two of three men in an automobile in which 16 gallons of alcohol were found, were wounded by shots fired at their car today by Henry P. Weaver, federal dry agent supervisor.

Arnold Turgeon of Madison, had several wounds in his head and Walter Pomerleau, also of Madison, was shot in the ear. They were taken to a hospital. Joseph Turgeon, the third occupant of the rum car, was not hit.

Delaware Senate Defeats Bill to Repeal Dry Law

DOVER, Del., April 13.—(AP)—The state senate today defeated two "wet" bills, one to repeal the Klair state prohibition enforcement law and the other providing for a state wide referendum on repeal of the Volstead act. The Klair repealer was lost by a vote of 12 to 8 and the referendum proposal by 11 to 8.

VETO DENOUNCED, ALSO PRAISED, AT WASHINGTON

Liberals See Illinois Surrender Home Rule.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 13.—[Special.]—Washington drys were jubilant today over the action of Gov. Louis L. Emmerson of Illinois in vetoing the bill which would have repealed the Illinois search and seizure act. Capital wets denounced the action of Gov. Emmerson and asserted his veto marked the breakdown of popular government in Illinois.

Senator Millard E. Tydings [Dem., Md.] sounded the keynote of the wet reaction to the step taken by Gov. Emmerson with the assertion that the people of Illinois, apparently, no longer enjoy the right to pass on their own affairs.

"As I see it," he said, "whatever Gov. Emmerson's reasons for vetoing the measure, it looks from this distance like a breakdown of popular government. The people of Illinois thoroughly understood the issue when the referendum was submitted. They had had many years of life under existing conditions and went to the polls and overwhelmingly declared that they did not want those conditions to continue. The legislature acted in accordance with the people's expressed vote. But the governor, by his veto, shows that the people no longer enjoy a right to pass on their own affairs in Illinois."

Regretted by J. M. Beck.

Representative James M. Beck [Rep., Pa.], former solicitor general and noted constitutional authority, said:

"While I feel some hesitancy in commenting, being from another state, I can say frankly that I learned of Gov. Emmerson's veto with deep regret. I may also say that I did not regard the action of the Illinois legislature in repealing the state law as in any sense an act of nullification. It is still a prerogative of the states, through their elected representatives, to choose whether they shall join in enforcing the prohibition laws or whether they shall leave that duty up to the federal government."

Leading Washington drys asserted that the Illinois governor should be congratulated for his stand in behalf of the prohibition law.

"I am very glad; in fact, delighted," said Senator Morris Sheppard [Dem., Tex.], co-author of the eighteenth amendment.

Borah Praises Veto.

Another senator who expressed the view that Gov. Emmerson should be congratulated for vetoing the repealer was Senator William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho].

"Gov. Emmerson is to be congratulated in rising above the excitement and passion of the prohibition controversy and courageously announcing a constitutional principle indispensable to the preservation of our dual system of government," Mr. Borah said.

Senator Wesley L. Jones [Rep., Wash.], author of the five-and-ten law, made this comment:

"Gov. Emmerson took the only possible course which a man with his responsibility and in his official position could take.

"As he expressed it, to have done otherwise, to have approved the act of the legislature or to have allowed it to become law, would have been equivalent to a nullification of the spirit and provisions of the federal constitution. The state of Illinois cannot afford to take any such course."

Churchmen Indorse It.

"We sent a telegram to Gov. Emmerson this afternoon congratulating him on his evidence of courage and clear thinking in vetoing the bill," Doris Pickett, a spokesman for the Methodist prohibition board, said today. "The movement for repeal of Illinois state prohibition laws originated in a few wealthy men. We never believed that the people of Illinois, when they realized the effect of the repealer, would countenance it, or a departure from the constitution in any other way."

Opinions of Wets and Drys on Veto of Repealer Bill

Anti-Prohibitionists Say Governor Repudiates Party Pledge.

Wet leaders yesterday greeted with varying degrees of indignation the news that Gov. Emmerson had vetoed the state prohibition law repeal bill, which had been adopted by the legislature. The consensus of the wets was that the governor, although putting himself in line as a prominent possibility for the Republican nomination for Vice President in 1932, had crippled his own party in Illinois.

Bernard W. Snow, chairman of the Cook county Republican committee, termed the veto a direct refusal to obey the orders of the majority of Illinois voters.

"Oppose 18th Amendment."

"As the present head of the Republican organization in Cook county, I refuse to accept the evasive reasoning of the governor as representative of Republican sentiment in this state," he declared. "Cook county Republicans are squarely opposed to the 18th amendment and the trail of criminal evils that it has brought and they are equally opposed to the doctrine that party promises may be disregarded by elective party officials.

"If party platforms are only a bait to trap the unwary voter, the basis for all party organization is gone."

Col. Ira L. Reeves of the Crusaders, an organization opposed to prohibition, declared a belief that the veto had been dictated from Washington and that it made Gov. Emmerson the outstanding dry in the United States.

A statement issued from the White House at Washington in reply to this statement, contained the assertion that President Hoover did not bring influence to bear on Gov. Emmerson to veto the bill.

Senator Lewis' Statement.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis, who was elected on a wet platform, commenting on the veto, said that Gov. Emmerson, by his action, had apparently forgotten the vote of the people of his state.

Seymour Wheeler, commander of the Illinois division of the Crusaders, said: "Gov. Emmerson has not only repudiated the will of the people but apparently no longer believes in representative government."

Emil Thiele, director of the Illinois division of the Association Opposed to Prohibition, said: "The veto will drive hundreds of thousands into the open arms of the Democratic party."

Mrs. William H. Mitchell, co-chairman of the Illinois division of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, asserted that the veto had sounded the death knell of the Republican party in Illinois.

"Gov. Emmerson has repudiated the express wishes of the people through the medium of the November referendum," she declared.

Mrs. Leslie Wheeler, co-chairman of the organization with Mrs. Mitchell, asserted that the governor had "shattered the principles of representative government in Illinois by this defiance of the mandate of the people."

Wohah Assails Veto.

Mrs. Clifford Rodman, who was one of the party of women who appeared in Springfield on Sunday morning for the hearing before the governor, said:

"What is going to become of representative government if our officials do not feel in any way bound by the sentiment of the electorate as demonstrated at the polls? With both the election and the passage of the bill through both houses of the legislature there should not be the slightest doubt about public sentiment in the matter."

Edward J. Brundage, Republican leader, said: "Gov. Emmerson should have obeyed the command of the popular vote."

Dry Leaders Praise Action as Wise Statesman's Decision.

Gov. Emmerson's veto of the bill to repeal the state prohibition law was heralded by dry leaders yesterday as an act which makes him "a national figure." The veto was hailed as "the first step toward a new era of law, order, and prosperity."

Howard P. Castle, for ten years a dry leader in the house of representatives at Springfield and now associated with the American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation, declared:

"Business men from Rockford to Cairo will benefit by this action of Gov. Emmerson. He has furnished the continued support needed to crystallize public sentiment overwhelmingly in favor of 100 per cent efficient law enforcement.

"The governor by this act has proven himself a man of great strength of character and of fine moral courage, which makes him a national figure in America. By this veto, in the face of the most bitter personal and political attacks, Gov. Emmerson worthily carries on the Illinois traditions of fearless independence, exemplified by Abraham Lincoln."

Wins Praise of W. C. T. U.

From the headquarters of the national W. C. T. U. in Evanston came the following statement:

"The governor's middle name is Lincoln. He justified it in one tremendous sentence that will shine through history: 'I am not for nullification.'

"The veto makes Gov. Emmerson a national figure, otherwise he might have been just characterized as one more cautious politician. We believe his future enhanced by his statesmanship, but in all events he did the right thing.

"His warning that personal disregard for the law cannot be cured by state disregard of the constitution is a barrier against further attempts to break down the constitution.

"The retention of the state laws against the illicit liquor traffic will be of material value to the efforts to clean up Chicago. With a new city administration pledged to break up crime, the governor's veto reminds the police that they have full power to stop the bootlegger and close the speakeasy."

The ministerial associations of the Congregational and Methodist Episcopal churches of the Chicago area adopted resolutions congratulating and expressing appreciation to the governor for the veto.

Act of Statesman, He Says.

"I think that the veto of the bill marks the turn of the tide and shows that on this basis we can now begin to reconstruct," A. M. Pennewell, pastor of the Ravenswood church told the Methodist ministers. He asked that the clergymen urge their congregations to adopt similar resolutions of congratulation and said he believed that individual letters would be appreciated by the governor after his "difficult decision."

Edward T. Lee, president of the Better Government Association of Chicago, said:

"I believe the governor has risen to the heights of the occasion. Not only has he acted as the governor of the state but as the governor of all the people of the state. His actions make him the governor for all time. He acted with reference to the future and in my opinion that is the test of a real statesman. Time will vindicate his action."

Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern university, sent a telegram to the governor congratulating him upon his decision, he announced. The message read:

"If our President and our governor continue to veto unwise proposals, great progress will be made."

WOMEN DEMAND RASKOB RESIGN AS PARTY CHIEF

Emmerson Is Praised for Repealer Veto.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 13.—[Special.]—Raskob's merely the stepfather of the Democratic party and he's got to go; Hoover's a "determined dry" who might look well in the White House in 1932; and Illinois' Governor Emmerson is a benevolent big brother to dry Democratic women. Formal resolutions were adopted concerning Raskob and Emmerson.

With this triple declaration, the National Woman's Democratic Law Enforcement league, whose members call themselves "Thomas Jefferson Democrats," tonight on Jefferson's birthday anniversary closed their convention. The women demanded Raskob's resignation as national chairman of "our once great party." They applauded the name of Herbert Hoover.

"The National Woman's Democratic Law Enforcement league meeting tonight in Washington sends its appreciation to the governor of Illinois for his veto of the bill repealing the state's enforcement act. You have dared to say to the forces of lawlessness and nullification, 'You shall not pass.' The homes in this great nation are safer tonight because of this splendid act of yours. We thank you, Mr. Governor. Our prayers are answered. We prayed for you."

Politicians Are "Warned."

Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson, who led a prohibition pilgrimage at the Houston convention, presiding at today's meetings, said:

"We give the politicians fair warning. If they don't heed our advice we shall not hesitate to duplicate our action of 1928."

Of John J. Raskob she cried: "We constitutional Democrats are ashamed and humiliated that at the head of the Democratic party is a nullificationist who has never had a Democratic heart beat, but who took the chairmanship, he said, 'to rid the country of the damnable affliction of prohibition'."

Opposes Four Candidates.

When she had verbally and vigorously dismissed from the list of acceptable presidential candidates these four: Smith, Ritchie, Roosevelt, and Reed, she crystallized the complaints of the drys into this message: "We demand the resignation of Raskob.

"We expect and want to see our party give us a candidate who represents the principles of Thomas Jefferson.

"We cannot and will not support a candidate offered by Tammany."

The women cheered and waved their handkerchiefs.

And then when she concluded, "the only issue is prohibition," a few fervent ladies breathed loud "amens."

Mrs. Clement L. Shaver of West Virginia, whose opposition to her husband's less arid views attracted so much attention at the Houston convention, where he played an important part, also demanded Raskob's resignation. She warned against rushing off to form a third party, and urged them to work for dryness inside the two major parties. Success, she predicted, will come to the drys, for "the people of America will not vote to put a wet in the White House or our government in the liquor business."

In the midst of all this crossing over into the Republican fields, and while the women were cheering the present occupant of the White House, the chairman introduced Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, former Massachusetts Republican, who migrated to Florida, "where I could keep my conscience."

Says Mrs. Sabin Is Wrong.

As head of the national woman's committee for law enforcement, Mrs. Peabody said, just the other day, that she represented 12,000,000 women. Then Mrs. Charles Sabin, head of the anti-prohibition women, whose meetings start tomorrow, called such a sweeping statement "ludicrous." So Mrs. Peabody today called Mrs. Sabin entirely wrong.

WOMEN DRY LAW FOES LEAVE FOR NATIONAL PARLEY

Chicago's delegation to the second annual conference of the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, to be held today and tomorrow at the Mayflower hotel in Washington, was joined yesterday at the Union station by others from Duluth, Portland, Ore., and other points. The group departed on the Liberty Limited of the Pennsylvania lines and will return the latter part of the week.

Mrs. William H. Mitchell and Mrs. Leslie Wheeler, co-chairmen of the Illinois division, headed the local representatives, which included Mrs. Clifford Rodman, Mrs. Kent Clow, Mrs. George Nichols, Mrs. E. V. R. Thayer, and Mrs. William A. Sauer. Mrs. Stanley Field will come to Washington from Sarasota for the conference, and Mrs. John F. Jelke Jr., from Palm Beach. Mrs. George Brennan and Mrs. Joseph Cudahy left today for the capital for the gathering.

FARMERS FEAR HIGHER TAXES FROM DRY VETO

Harris, Ill., April 13.—[Special.]—Farmers in this region were openly indignant tonight over Gov. Emmerson's veto of the state prohibition repeal.

Twenty of them formed a committee under the leadership of Sam Hoge, owner of a 780 acre farm, and voted to send a resolution of protest to the governor.

According to Hoge, the governor's veto will require two years to undo. However, he said, it will mean higher taxes, and a possible depreciation of land to $25 an acre in their farms.

Rain of Black Mud Falls 2 Hours in North Quebec

CHICOUTIMI, Que., April 13.—(AP)—Awestricken citizens of this northern Quebec town stood in streets as dark as night at noon today and were drenched by a downpour of rain laden with black mud that stained handkerchiefs and white paper outspread to catch the strange precipitation. The phenomenon lasted more than two hours.

Picks Up Object in Yard; Right Hand Is Blown Off

Taylorville, Ill., April 13.—[Special.]—Jackson Cogswell had his right hand shot off today when he picked up a metal article in his yard, which is believed to have been a bomb. He saw a boy near his car, and as he picked it up it exploded, destroying his hand and injuring his face and chest.

U. S. DRYS RAID JUICE PLANT IN NEW YORK CITY

300 Gallons Alleged Wine Seized by Agents.

New York, April 13.—[Special.]—One of the New York plants of Fruit Industries, Ltd., the cooperative California grape growers' organization of which Mrs. Mable Willebrandt, former assistant United States attorney general, is counsel, was raided today by the police and agents of Andrew McCampbell, prohibition administrator, who seized 300 gallons of alleged wine.

A. W. WOODCOCK.

Though the raid followed word from Amos W. Woodcock, prohibition director in Washington, that in his opinion the sale and advertisement of grape concentrates in their present form was illegal, Mr. McCampbell in announcing the raid insisted that it represented no new policy on the part of his office.

The plant raided was in the Bronx and, according to Mr. McCampbell, it is one of six maintained by the same interests represented by Mrs. Willebrandt in this district.

Sells Grape Concentrates.

The company's principal business is that of selling grape concentrates to home consumers. The Volstead law permits the possession of fruit juices in the home, specifying that they must be unfermented, but the federal courts have held that in case of their fermentation no penalty shall ensue unless it be proved that they are "intoxicating in fact."

Another business of the company, Mr. McCampbell explained, is that of selling wine under permit for sacramental purposes on orders signed by rabbis. The raid, he said, resulted from the purchase last week by police who visited the plant of two quarts of supposed wine, for which they paid $1 a quart.

The police swore out complaints and after an analysis of the liquid had been made, a federal commissioner issued warrants Saturday on which the arrests were made. The prohibition agents, according to Mr. McCampbell, merely accompanied the police to execute the federal warrant.

Only two men employes of the plant were arrested.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 13.—[Special.]—Sale of fruit juices on the expectation that it will develop into a 12 to 20 per cent alcoholic product is not in keeping with the spirit of the eighteenth amendment, according to opinion expressed today by Amos W. Woodcock, director of prohibition. No indication was given by Mr. Woodcock, however, that he intended to launch an immediate campaign against Fruit Industries, Ltd.

Asked specifically concerning the legality of the activities of Fruit Industries, Ltd., which is partly financed by federal farm board loans, Mr Woodcock simply stated that if it advertised its grape juice and kegs with the intent that they be used in the manufacture of a beverage which is intoxicating in fact, "then such advertising and sale are unlawful."

GROCERY ROBBED OF $3,500.

Two armed bandits invaded the Colias Brothers grocery at 748 South Halsted street yesterday, menaced four employes and one of the owners, and escaped with currency, $3,500 and $3,000 after stealing one of their victims.

speed and energy to effect the immediate establishment of a republic."

Tried to Claim Victory.

The government did attempt early this morning to claim a monarchist victory at the polls, considering that 5,875 Republican aldermen had been elected to 22,150 monarchists. But the monarchy's victory was in the small villages, where 50 votes elected a candidate, while in the Republican triumphs in Madrid and Barcelona each alderman drew from 10,000 to 12,000 votes each.

Many of the monarchists wanted to blind themselves to the debacle. But not the cunning Count Romanones. He immediately went to the king and urged two things. The first was immediate abdication in favor of Prince Don Juan, 18 years old and King Alfonso's third son. The prince of the Asturias and Don Jaime, the two older boys, have infirmities. The count also urged the immediate calling of a constitutional government under Melquiades Alvarez and to convoke a constituent assembly.

Later in the day two of the most important generals in the Spanish army went to counsel the king against looking to the army for help. The chances of Alfonso abdicating in favor of Prince Juan, his uncle, Don Carlos, inspector general of the army, or anybody else and getting away with it seem slim.

"The nation's verdict was a republic, not an Alfonso III. or XIV.," Zamora, provisional president of the republic," flatly said today.

Meanwhile, in Barcelona, where the Republicans won out by a vote of 95,000 to 25,000, the Republican aldermen announced that if the king has not abdicated by Thursday at the latest they will take the city hall by force and proclaim a republic.

Rioter Slain by Police.

SEVILLE, Spain, April 14.—[Tuesday.]—(AP)—One man was killed and another was seriously wounded today at Glarosa in a fight between political rioters and the civil guards.

CONTINUE SUIT CHARGING MISUSE OF FLOOD FUNDS

The hearing of the charges that former Mayor Thompson improperly used funds contributed by school children and others in 1927 for the relief of Mississippi flood sufferers was again continued yesterday by Superior Judge Robert E. Gentzel.

A representative from the office of Samuel Ettelson, corporation counsel in Thompson's cabinet and attorney for the former mayor, appeared in court and said that Ettelson was leaving Chicago and would not return until July 1. A continuance to that date was granted.

The suit charges that Thompson failed to disburse to flood sufferers $102,855 of the $139,772 originally contributed more than three years ago and that he recently diverted large sums from this $102,855 remainder for political purposes.

Thompson is now on a Mississippi river pilgrimage to New Orleans.

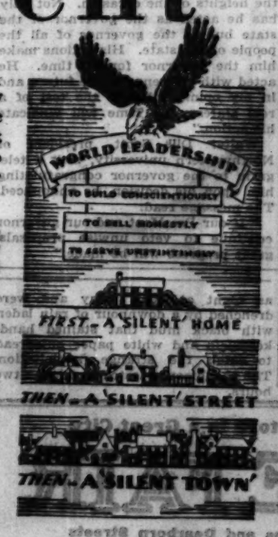
They are moving to "Silent Town"

Thousands of names are added every year to the directory of "Silent Town" . . . the names of new Silent Automatic enthusiasts. Why? What has made this the fastest growing body of oil burner owners in the world? Let these satisfied owners in Chicago and nearby cities tell you a few of the almost countless reasons.

F. M. Johnson, of 1322 Greenwood St., Evanston, Ill., writes: "I have found that everything you claimed for Silent Automatic is true, especially in the matter of oil consumption, which was 40 per cent less than I had used in previous years. I want to advise you of my entire satisfaction."

Joseph R. Winterbotham, attorney, of 11 South La Salle St., Chicago, says: "I think my Silent Automatic is fine. I consider it very economical to operate. Furthermore, today, about ten months after my burner was installed, I am still able to read a newspaper through the pyrex door of my boiler."

John L. Wilds, of 244 Oxford Road, Kenilworth, Ill., prizes his Silent Automatic because of dependability, economy in fuel consumption and the ample supply of heat it provides. Chester D. Tripp, of 1404 Forest Ave., Evanston, Ill., emphasizes both efficiency and economy of operation.



We might go on indefinitely, quoting similar letters from men and women who, wherever they live, are proud to be known as residents of "Silent Town". The words vary, but the sense is the same in all . . . expressing universal satisfaction with Silent Automatic performance, service and operating cost.

We say without hesitation: "Whatever you can ask of any oil burner, Silent Automatic will give you." If this were not true, Silent Automatic could not continue, year after year, to outsell all other automatic oil burners. Nor would "Silent" streets, "Silent" neighborhoods and communities continue to grow around single isolated installations.

After all, the one thing you seek in home heating service is the one thing responsible for Silent Automatic world leadership . . . COMPLETE SATISFACTION. Before you select your oil burner let us give you the FACTS.

JOHNSON SEES CRIME ON WANE FOR WORLD'S FAIR

U. S. Attorney Tells of War on Gangster.

United States Attorney George E. Q. Johnson declared himself an optimist last night during a talk at a conference of civic organizations at the Union League club, at which he discussed organized crime, what is being done to combat it, and what must be done. He predicted that by the time of the 1933 Chicago World's Fair this city will be the most law abiding in the country.

At present, he asserted, the cost of crime throughout the country is three times that of maintaining the federal government. This is due to gangs whose existence is due to privilege which Mr. Johnson described as the result of immunity to violate the law granted by some person in authority.

Hard to Get into Gangs.

"It is harder to get into a gang than it is to get into high society," the federal prosecutor stated. "I know because I have tried to put men into gangs and they needed more credentials than I was able to give them.

"Gangs are bodies of men organized to do business and it is up to all of us to tear away the false faces of gangdom and show there is no glamour to crime. Gang leaders are pasty faced crooks who have political or police connections. They rule and they commit murder at will because they give their victim no chance. They stalk their prey and blast him with machine gun fire or shoot him in the back and in the morning many of you good people smile and say "good riddance," which gives courage to the killers and breeds tolerance toward murder in the minds of the community.

Will Kill Witnesses.

"The reason there have been no convictions in 270 gang murders of which my office has made a survey is that they unhesitatingly kill witnesses who might testify against them. I had one experience of taking a witness before the grand jury at 9 o'clock in the morning and having him shot in the back of the head before 9 o'clock that night.

"These gangs couldn't live except for corrupt police or the paralyzing arm of political influence. In my judgment there is more political paralyzing of the police than there is of inherent corruptness in the members of the force."

Mr. Johnson also told of his proposal to introduce a bill at Springfield seeking a law requiring full publicity on all public contracts. He cited figures on fifteen public contracts—figures taken from income tax records—showing huge graft payments and profits, in most instances, of more than 50 per cent of the contract. Frank J. Loesch, as another speaker at the conference, advocated a metropolitan police force.

Randolph Praises Cermak.

Col. Robert Isham Randolph, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, speaking last night before the Chicago Evening club in the Union League Club building, asserted that Chicago was fortunate in having elected a mayor "who knows the game and is better equipped than most business men for the task before him."

"Mayor Cermak's preelection declarations of policy are already being achieved," he said. "He is especially to be praised for his selection of cabinet members.

KILLED WHEN HE IS STRUCK BY HIT AND RUN DRIVER

Oscar Ortman, 40 years old, 1039 North Central Park avenue, was killed last night when he was struck by a hit and run motorist at Chicago avenue and Sedgwick street. Witnesses obtained the license number of the car, which was traced to Tony Lisciandrella, 826 Milton street. An hour after the accident Lisciandrella appeared at the West North avenue police station and reported his car had been stolen. He was held.

This death and four others increased the Cook county motor toll for the year to 339. The victims:

Robert Greenwood, 6 years old, 8251 Avalon avenue. Fatally injured when he ran in front of an automobile driven by Miss Myra Grace, 6825 Ridgeland avenue, a school teacher, while playing in front of his home. Miss Grace was not held.

Adolph Strimas, 3 years old, 3512 Union avenue. Died in the German Deaconess hospital of injuries received on Saturday when he and his mother, Mrs. Kate Strimas, were struck by an auto at Union avenue and 35th street. Mrs. Strimas was killed. The driver of the car was Harold J. Roldan of Columbus, O. He was held.

Joseph Taylor, 57 years old, 712 West Monroe street. Died in the County hospital of injuries received on Saturday when struck at Throop street and Jackson boulevard.

Unidentified man about 45 years old. Killed when struck on Milwaukee avenue a half mile north of Dempster street by an automobile driven by Arthur M. Manuel, 709 Erie street, Oak Park.

Both Near Death

Mrs. Pauline Birr, 35 years old, gave poison yesterday to her 10 year old daughter, Virginia, in their home at 1638 Greenleaf avenue. She then attempted to commit suicide by swallowing a portion of the same drug. Both were taken to the Rogers Park hospital, where is was said their condition was critical.

WHEALAN TAKES PLACE AS HEAD OF COUNTY BOARD

Emmett Whealan, a member of the county commissioners for 12 years, yesterday presided at his first meeting as the new president of the board. Mr. Whealan was unanimously elected president on Saturday to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Mayor Cermak.

This evening President Whealan and a party of friends will leave for a ten day sojourn at West Baden, Ind. Included in the party will be Mrs. Whealan, Commissioner Peter M. Kelly, Commissioner Homer Byrd, John F. Delaney, secretary to the president, and Eric Hall, county architect.

Following a series of brush fires which for a time Sunday threatened to destroy several sections of the forest preserves, Mr. Whealan yesterday issued an order forbidding the building of fires in the preserves. A force of 150 employes, augmented by Boy Scouts, was busy all day Sunday fighting fires.

SCHOOLS TO GET $400,000 LOAN TO PAY WORKERS

Will Send Tax Paper by Air for Mayor to Sign.

Lewis E. Myers, president of the board of education, announced yesterday that he had obtained a loan of $400,000 from Halsey, Stuart & Co. with which to meet a pay roll for civil service school employés which falls due on Thursday. Francis X. Busch, corporation counsel, indicated that he would approve the negotiations today.

As soon as Mr. Busch's signature and those of the city comptroller and treasurer are affixed to the tax warrant offered as security for the loan it will be sent by airplane to Miami, Fla., where Mayor Cermak is spending a short vacation. It is expected that the mayor will sign and return the warrant by air mail, so that the necessary cash may be obtained in time to meet the pay roll.

Mr. Myers refused to discuss the deal in detail and would not tell who represented Halsey, Stuart & Co. R. E. Simond, head of the buying department for municipal papers for the company, said he knew nothing of the transaction.

President Myers announced two months ago that after April 1 the board's resources would be exhausted. Teachers and other employés anticipated another payless period similar to that of last fall.

Mr. Myers has blamed the reassessment of property and the nonpayment of taxes, combined with the refusal of banks to purchase tax warrants for 1931, for the depletion of the school board's funds.

Mr. Myers indicated that the only way the teachers and civil service employés' combined pay roll of $2,750,000, due May 1, could be met would be through the sale of tax warrants.

SCHOOL LEADERS OPPOSE RAISING OF AGE LIMIT

William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, and William L. Bodine, director of the department of compulsory education, yesterday voiced objections to senate bill 228, recently introduced in the state legislature by Senator Bohrer. The bill, which is an amendment to the school law, would force children to attend school until they are 18 years of age, as compared with the 16 year limit now in effect.

Mr. Bogan pointed out that no penalty or means of enforcement is provided. He also stated that such an amendment should be accompanied by an appropriation bill to accommodate the extra expense of the additional equipment and housing facilities which would be needed. Mr. Bodine said that no educational authorities had been consulted prior to the proposing of the amendment.

REFUSES TO HALT CHICAGO PHONE RATE HEARINGS

Washington, D. C., April 13.—[Special.]—The United States Supreme court today denied the request of the Illinois commerce commission and the city of Chicago for the right to file a petition asking a writ of mandamus against the District court in which the Chicago telephone rate case is pending.

The petition was in effect a request for a clarification of the Supreme court order which remanded the case to the lower court for further hearings. Had the Supreme court granted the mandamus asked it would have meant expediting the hearings, which seek millions in refunds to telephone subscribers.

The commerce commission reduced the Chicago telephone rates Aug. 16, 1923. The District court held the reduction confiscatory and enjoined it. The Supreme court last December set aside the District court decree. The District court, proceeding to carry out the Supreme court's directions, ordered further hearings which the petitioners say would consume two years. The Supreme court's action today leaves the case as it was.

SOUGHT AS STILL OPERATOR.

Special prohibition agents last night were seeking Fiory Calgaratta, 586 Forsythe avenue, Calumet City, as the alleged operator of a 500 gallon alcohol still found in his home yesterday.

KIDNAPING QUIZ IS ORDERED BY GOV. LA FOLLETTE

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Monroe, Wis., April 13.—[Special.]—Gov. Philip F. La Follette today ordered an investigation of the kidnaping last Thursday evening of Fred J. Blumer of Fred J. Blumer, 51 year old president of Blumer Products company, manufacturers of near beer. The governor demanded a complete report from District Attorney Randal J. Elmer of Green county.

GOV. LA FOLLETTE. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The request came as negotiations were believed to be leading to the freedom of the brewer on payment of a portion of the $150,000 ransom demanded.

Green county officials have not been active in the case.

District Attorney Elmer interpreted the order as an expresion of sympathy to the Blumer family, since Blumer was widely known throughout the state. He said the governor expressed himself as desiring to offer state police facilities in the solution of the case, if such action was shown to be warranted in the report. Elmer scoffed at the hint of rebuke on the failure of local officials to move in four days.

NOISY refrigerators are forever OUT OF DATE

With no moving parts to wear, Electrolux will remain absolutely silent as long as you have it

NOBODY ever did want a noisy refrigerator. But in the past if you wanted an automatic refrigerator you've had to take the noisy kind or do without.

That is no longer true. Electrolux gives you all the benefits of automatic refrigeration without a sound. It has no moving parts. Nothing to wear, to vibrate, to make noise, now or ever. It doesn't alternately stop and start. Instead, it works all the time, and so makes cold that is constant, steady—freezes ice cubes quickly.

This refrigerator is absurdly simple. No machinery. Nothing to bother with. Just a tiny gas flame and a tiny flow of water. They act on a liquid refrigerant which is hermetically sealed in rigid steel. The refrigerant itself is ordinary ammonia, little stronger than household ammonia. The tiny gas flame is completely protected by an automatic shut-off.

So perfect is Electrolux that you think it must cost more to operate than other makes. Instead, it costs much less. Less, even, than buying ice Never more than a few cents a day.

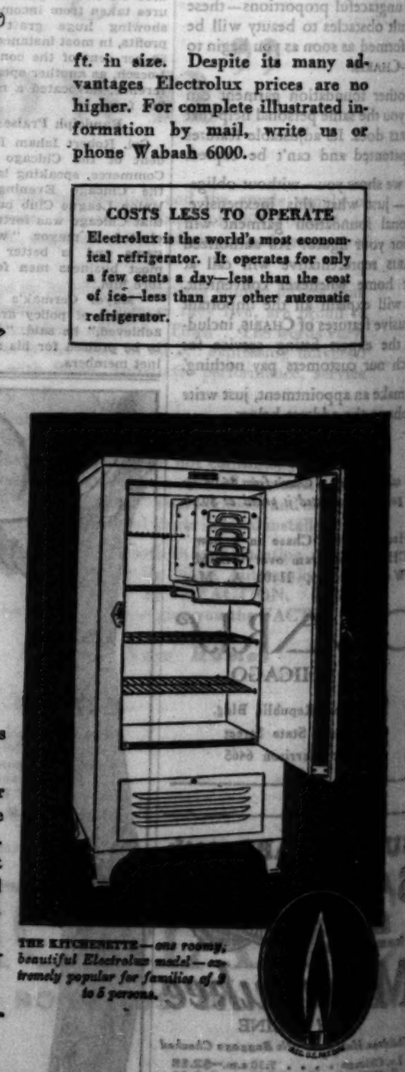
The installation, too, is very simple. Connections for gas and water are through concealed flexible copper tubing, and are quickly and easily made for you by your gas company. And should you ever need service on Electrolux, you get the prompt, efficient kind of service for which your gas company is famous.

Compared with the absolute silence of Electrolux, noisy refrigerators are as out-of-date as the old time fat policeman.

Leading architects and builders have been quick to sense the advantages of this refrigerator. They have specified it in a multitude of the country's finest private homes and apartments. More than 130,000 Electrolux refrigerators have already been installed.

Be sure to see Electrolux at your local gas company's showrooms before buying any automatic refrigerator. Look for it in the apartment that you rent. There are 10 household models, ranging from 3 cu. ft. to 20 cu. ft. in size. Despite its many advantages Electrolux prices are no higher. For complete illustrated information by mail, write us or phone Wabash 6000.

COSTS LESS TO OPERATE
Electrolux is the world's most economical refrigerator. It operates for only a few cents a day—less than the cost of ice—less than any other automatic refrigerator.



THE KITCHENETTE—one roomy, beautiful Electrolux model—extremely popular for families of 3 to 5 persons.

A tiny gas flame takes the place of all moving parts.

Jim Smith Goes Back On The Job

Jim Smith didn't open the door. He just went through it. In six hard strides he was in the kitchen and had his arms around a woman.

"Back on the job," he said. "She starts rolling tomorrow."

The woman looked up. She had her hand on his arm. She felt the little ripple of muscles under his sleeve. There was a film over her eyes. She said nothing.

There was a moment of awkward silence. Then Jim looked down at her with the funny, crooked smile that had made her marry him in the first place and, in a voice that swaggered up from his middle, he bellowed out, "When do we eat?"

Like a flash the kitchen was in a bustle, and the business of living was under way again.

The children came in, not to get the news but to bring it. For word had gone out that "the work" was starting up tomorrow. And the word on that subject travels fast.

The dinner table was a Babel of voices. The conversation ranged from the bills to be paid to the things that were wanted.

"Get 'em," said Jim. "I'll handle the bills." And there was no swagger in his voice, but only the high courage that seems to come always from physical effort. It's only brain-workers who are afraid. Muscle-workers, never—when their muscles have anything to do.

"We'd better not go too fast," his wife began.

"Get 'em," said Jim. For the new Jim Smiths of America are thoroughly imbued with the idea that it is part of their job to start spending when they get a job.

After dinner Jim went out on the porch, the children set about with the dishes, and Mary, from whom the burden seemed suddenly lifted, went down the street. In wage-earning America, strangely enough, it is upon the woman that the burden of management seems to fall when the work shuts down.

Jim sat alone and smoked, and thought of many things. But always uppermost in his mind was the feeling scarcely formulated into words or thoughts that now, at last, his stomach would be all right again. Jim's digestion hadn't been so good since the work shut down. And if there is anything that you can thank your stars for, it is that the digestion of wage-earning America is good; because that's why the work of America goes on.

There was no problem now. He knew his work. He had done it all his life. He was good at his job, and everybody knew it. And everybody on the work relied on him to do that job. His muscles were trained, his mind was trained. It wasn't as if he were going into some strange office to attack some new problem over which his mind must grope and struggle till it found some solution satisfactory to his boss.

He was going back to his old place, at his old job. And there was no problem involved.

Mary Smith came back. Jim smiled at her as she came up the steps. And smiled again as he saw her favorite magazine under her arm.

"I haven't bought it for quite awhile," she said.

Then she went in by the light on the table, to thumb it over here and there before she settled down to what she wanted to read.

That magazine meant much in that household. It had to mean much to bring a quarter from a pocketbook that had not been replenished for some time. But then, the personal incident of personal lives always does mean much. Any folk-literature goes deep. Its writers, to tell their stories, must still be alive. And no matter what scourge of the spirit they have come through to tell the tale, the travail of that scourge must bring its reward, or there would be no tale to tell.

So Mary settled down to the stories that re-affirmed those world-old virtues by which the greater part of the human race must live. Altogether a wholesome mental food for the normal mind of a woman and a man.

From its pages she also planned her purchases and her meals. For here were helpful suggestions that came within her range, and the national names of many things she knew.

The evening wore on. The clock struck. Work was beginning tomorrow again. Jim got up from his chair. His muscles tightened in a deep, hard stretch that left him gloriously relaxed. He looked at the stars for a moment, quietly; then turned into the house.

"Come on," he said; "it's time to go to bed."

Fortunately or unfortunately, True Story Magazine does not hear very much of Jim Smith or his family when he is out of a job. Ninety-six percent of True Story circulation is not subscription. It has to be bought at the newsstand each month. And naturally Mary Smith does not pay a quarter for a magazine when Jim Smith has been laid off. So True Story's is always a fair weather circulation.

It is only after they have returned to the job that the stories of whatever they have been through begin coming in to us.

Of course, eighty-five percent of the wage-earners of America have never been out of a job. But now that those who were out are coming back again, we are beginning to get the stories of their experiences.

And the reflection of these stories as being told through their letters and manuscripts is not only exceedingly interesting, but is perhaps the most important collection of data that could be gathered. And here is what we seem to be finding out.

First, those who have been out of a job during these past eighteen months have, in the main, been under less strain than ever before in any similar ordeal. In spite of the fact that most wage-earners have been spending freely, they evidently have also been saving carefully; and therefore have something to go upon. And we find this verified by the report of the savings banks whose deposits have actually increased during this period.

Second, for the above reason most of these who were out of jobs are apparently ready to start out again just where they left off. In other words, we do not find in their stories the bitter facing of almost hopeless situations that we found at the end of the depression ten years ago.

Third, as nearly as we can estimate, less than three percent have been through actual privation. And the work of our great civic organizations and business heads throughout America has lessened even the degree of those privations.

Fourth, and most important of all, in these letters and manuscripts, we find practically none of the reactions of bitterness and hatred toward capital and employment that have always flared up during other similar situations.

There is today a greater degree of good-will on the part of labor than has ever been known before in the hundred and fifty years of our factory system.

This again is verified by the fact that there have been no major strikes or lockouts during this entire period. This new upswing of progress is going forward with all the good-will you could ask for on the part of your wage-earning group.

And that, gentlemen, is a tremendous forward step in itself.

And finally, to say a word for ourselves, all of this in turn is probably why your advertising response in True Story Magazine is now so great as to be the subject of comment in nearly every advertising group.

Any response is always in direct proportion to the good-will that engenders it.

EMMERSON'S VETO.

Gov. Emmerson has vetoed the prohibition repeal. At the outset of a discussion of this executive disapproval of an important act of the legislature it should be said that, although the governor thus has played the hand of the dry autocracy, his position is different from that of other administrations which have done the same thing in the central states. Submission to dry dictation has been in exchange for indulgence of crooked politics. Thus prohibition has been a cover for corruption and, as Illinois previously had discovered along with the neighboring states, another name for it. Gov. Emmerson's administration has been clean and has not had this taint, but he may find it increasingly hard now to avoid the consequences of an alliance which hitherto has produced scandal and protection for it.

Evidently the veto message had been already written when the governor gave a hearing Sunday to citizens who desired him to sign the repeal act. He argues that the Republican state convention, of which he was chairman, bound only representatives in congress to accept the decision of the referendum. He says that the state must proceed concurrently with the federal government to modify the liquor laws and that with the repeal in effect there would be no means by which the state could control the sale of intoxicants.

Citizens who read the message probably will be impressed according to their previous convictions. The defeated drys who demanded that he nullify the decisions of the majority will think that he explained his action logically and justified it rationally. The opposition to prohibition will find his message weak, shambling, evasive, and tricky.

The Republican state convention in resolutions referred to the submission of questions under the public policy act as the statutory and constitutional method of ascertaining the will of the people and urged all voters to participate in it. Three questions were submitted. Two had to do with federal prohibition. One was for the repeal of the state prohibition act. That question polled the largest vote in the referendum. The affirmative vote was larger than the same vote on the two federal questions and it was much larger that the vote on the acts of the legislature submitted for ratification. For instance, the affirmative vote was larger than the combined yes and no vote on the revenue amendment. It was more than twice larger than the affirmative vote on the banking amendment. There were 250,000 more affirmative votes for it than there were affirmative votes for the women's juror act.

The Republican resolutions specifically bound the representatives in congress to follow the decision on the two federal questions, but Gov. Emmerson assumes that no obligation was involved in the purely state question submitted at the same time and covered by every other utterance in the resolutions. The party had indorsed the referendum. It had asked the voters to use it. Mr. Emmerson finds that the decision was negligible.

The legislature did not take this view. The repeal bill was passed. When Mr. Emmerson was given the act he was dealing with the work of a majority in the Republican state convention, a majority in the popular referendum, and a majority in the legislature. He took dictation from his personal feelings and from the drys who have controlled in this state. It was trickery and bad faith, for which Mr. Emmerson is responsible to the voters who have been deceived.

If little patience can be had with the political justifications the governor attempts, less can be given the other reasons he assigns. That Illinois or any other state is compelled to wait for federal action and cannot exercise its own judgment in promoting the modification of liquor laws is unthinkable except by fanatics. The right which New York, Massachusetts, Wisconsin, and other states have exercised is denied by the governor of Illinois, although he had presented to him the will of the majority expressed in popular vote and in legislation, with the indorsement of his own party.

He said Illinois would be defenseless without its own prohibition law. This is a curious dry reversal of the prohibition argument that the states are defenseless without the federal law. In fact, the only thing the repeal would have affected would have been the graft which rural gype and city police collect. There is plenty of law in Illinois to abate any of the nuisances the governor said would spring up.

Mr. Emmerson has consulted the dry squirarchy and again submitted to it. He has proved again to the cities of the state the untrustworthiness of the rural control which works upon denial of franchise rights and majority will. He has given the Republican party another black eye.

REPUBLICAN VOTES IN SPAIN.

Spain's municipal elections have exceeded expectations in the volume of the Republican returns, which are regarded as admonitory. The municipal elections have a peculiar significance for the national government, indicating for it a mandate. Observers say that Alfonso will not accept it as his ejection, but will endeavor to trim and maintain himself. Jay Allen, THE TRIBUNE'S well informed correspondent, says that the alternatives to abdication are a military dictatorship or a constitutional government with a constituent assembly.

In the historical development of Europe the destruction of popular government in the emergence from the dark ages was almost the equivalent of the ice age in geology. England alone remained outside of the political moraine, although Switzerland arose above it. Elsewhere absolutism spread over the face of the earth. The institutions of self-government seemingly were destroyed. The English withstood shock after shock to survive the waves of despotism which Plantaganet, Tudor and Stuart released to sweep away their representative assembly. Finally, with a king beheaded and another exiled, they won under the Dutch William of Orange with a foreign army to make good their constitutional rights.

Spain remained under the débris of the absolutist movement after France, the Low Countries and central Europe had fought and dug their way out. The Spanish Republicans failed when the French revolution gave them a chance. Spain was not drawn into the world war. Consequently it was outside the explosive after effects which elsewhere shook down the monarchy. The old Spanish cortes was an assembly of proud liberties before which the king was but "first among equals." It was destroyed and in centuries of intolerance never regained its place.

No other nation in Europe has found it so difficult to work its way out of the depressing effects of the monarchical system as Spain, but the salvation of its future has been contained in the character of its people. That has survived the ruin of political institutions.

AMERICAN SOLIDARITY.

Last year the Pan-American union passed a resolution in favor of the designation by the governments of the American republics of April 14 as a special annual occasion for the commemoration of the sovereignty of the American nations and of the voluntary union of all in one continental community. This resolution was adopted by President Hoover and by the governments of other members of the union and Pan-American day will be celebrated appropriately this year. The President's proclamation ordered the flag to be displayed on all government buildings and invited the schools, civic associations, and people of the United States generally "to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies, thereby giving expression to the spirit of continental solidarity and to the sentiments of cordiality and friendly feeling which the government and people of the United States entertain toward the peoples and governments of the republics of the American continent."

It is to be hoped this new formal occasion will be well established throughout the Americas, and we think it will be. There is a growing appreciation, at least among the more thoughtful citizens of all the American countries, of the importance of American solidarity and coöperation. The relations of our republics have been in past time affected to our common injury by specific collisions of interest and by misunderstandings which a comprehension of common interests and a larger and more sympathetic feeling might have avoided. Still more important to us all than the possibility of avoiding these temporary differences is the development of a strong and persistent sense of our common ideals and problems, our common destiny. Such a sense will inevitably grow with time because it is founded upon the major realities of our American life. But it can be greatly hastened by the deliberate effort represented by such an agency of coöperation as the Pan-American union and by other efforts to increase our mutual knowledge and stimulate that mutual sympathy which knowledge fosters.

Present conditions not only in the American continents but throughout the world have emphasized the need of American solidarity. It is not a new ideal, but it is one which year by year takes on a more serious meaning. It shone in the very dawn of American republicanism, when the infant nations of Latin America first achieved their political independence. A quarter century ago the former president of Uruguay, José Battle y Ordonez, said:

"Born on the same continent and in the same epoch, ruled by the same institutions, animated by the same spirit of liberty and progress, and destined alike to cause republican ideas to prevail on earth, it is natural that the nations of all America should approach nearer and nearer to each other and unite more and more amongst themselves; and it is natural, also, that the most powerful and the most advanced amongst them should be the one to take the initiative in this union."

Such expressions could be quoted from many outstanding men in the public affairs of the American nations, and they are not mere rhetoric, but the solid material of American purpose. Pan-Americanism is not only an aspiration but a force of growing significance not only in the progress of the Americas but in that of the world.

MOVING ALL BUT THE LOT.

[New York Times.]

For most people the business of moving household goods and chattels from the old home to the new offers all the trouble they can stand. The final trip with the cat and the canary and the fragile candlesticks often seems the last straw. Yet there are hardy souls who have the courage to buy a house complete and move house, chimneys, lightning rods and furnishings to their chosen address.

On Long Island there are still standing numbers of old colonial houses, and it is the fashion nowadays for modern admirers to buy them, rehabilitate them, and, if necessary, transport them to a new setting. This seems a happier fate for these pre-revolutionary dwellings than to fall into decay or to be preserved as museums.

Home and Field magazine suggests that Mr. Percy Hammond probably holds the record for seal in house moving. His present home was picked up a mile away, and in spite of its 200 odd years stood the journey very well. Since the charm of the house lay in its venerable appearance, the ivy covering its walls was preserved intact, the old vines being carefully uprooted. All during the moving process—for houses travel slowly—the new owner faithfully nursed the ivy. But the shock was too great. It died en route.

Other buyers of old homes have been more successful in transporting shrubs, trellises, vines, and even soil houses to a new site.

POISON FATALITIES.

A STUDY of 440 deaths from acute poisoning found recorded in the files of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company showed that 115 resulted from mistaking poisonous drugs for medicines or from overdoses of medicines. Bichloride of mercury, or corrosive sublimate, caused 22 of these deaths; arsenic, 12; lysol, 11; carbolic acid, 6. Some 34 others were distributed among a considerable number of other poisons.

Overdoses of allonal, luminal and veronal were responsible for 18 deaths. The deaths due to taking poison accidentally occurred principally among children. There were 104 such. Strychnine led the list of poisons causing deaths among children, followed by kerosene, lye, oil of wintergreen, arsenic, and phosphorus.

It is only the occasional accident which causes deaths. Nonfatal accidents are far more frequent, but they do not get into the records. Here is a letter from a man who was in the habit of using eye drops diluted. He got his bottles mixed and used some acid from the wrong bottle. Fortunately, the dilution was great enough so that the drops did not cause blindness, though he had a very bad five minutes and an uncomfortable week.

The lesson is that medicines should be conspicuously labeled and then put and kept in a closed cabinet. The cabinet should be placed where it is inaccessible to children. It should have narrow shelves, and the bottles and boxes should be placed in position to show the labels plainly. The position of the box should permit it to be capable of being well lighted day or night.

The danger of drinking substitutes for whisky is shown by these figures. One hundred eighteen deaths resulted from drinking wood alcohol or denatured alcohol. When a man drinks these substitutes he is playing with death.

It is generally thought that there are more deaths from poison than find their way into the records. Some of these may be homicides. Taking a man for a ride and shooting him as an evidence of hospitality is a crude procedure scarcely worthy of our advanced society. Various classical citizens who lived a few centuries ago were much more skillful and scientific. They make our bump-'em-off ruffians look like ignorant apes. But it is anticipated that even these gorillas will learn the art and even that some of them have already done so.

Few police departments, sheriffs' departments and coroners' offices are equipped to analyze for poisons, especially some of the subtler kinds.

TRAINING IS NEEDED.

L. G. H. writes: My 14 months old baby awakens in the night, talks and jabbers for hours, and finally cries. Up to two months ago she was a healthy child with a good disposition. Now she is irritable, screams while her food is being prepared, and has a bad disposition generally. At first a warm bath would cause her to go to sleep quietly. Not so now. I am careful with her diet and physically she is all right. My eldest girl went through the same experience until she was four years old. My second is more quiet.

REPLY.

I suspect that the trouble is not physical. You are feeding your child properly and taking care of her physical health. The fault lies in training. There may be too much excitement in the evening. I suspect you are not training her right in the daytime. Put your thought and study on that phase of the subject.

There are good books on the training of babies. Start with a booklet by Thom, sold for a few cents by the U. S. Children's bureau, department of labor, Washington, D. C.

KEEP YOUR HEAD CLEAN.

S. K. writes: I am a man of 21 years and my hair is falling out in the front part of my head. Is there anything that can be done about it?

REPLY.

Try keeping your scalp very clean and persistent brushing of the hair.

MORE FACTS REQUIRED.

Chicago, March 18.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Is it compulsory for stepchildren, whether married or single, to support their widowed stepmother?

L. C. F.

They are not obliged to support her on the bare facts stated.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

DEPENDS UPON DATE.

Chicago, March 30.—[Friend of the People.]—I have a friend who came to this country about 1885 and was married on the above date. Her husband was naturalized at that time but she was not. Is she a citizen? F. K.

If the husband was naturalized before Sept. 22, 1922, his wife became a citizen through his naturalization.

RENEWAL OF LEASE.

Chicago, March 27.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My mother and I rented a four room flat and I signed a lease for a year two years ago last October (1929) and I lived there with her the full two years. Last October (1930) my mother, sister and her husband had a verbal agreement to stay till spring, at the same rental, and the landlord redecorated for them. They paid March rent March 15 and failed to give notice until that day saying they were going to move April 1. 1. He claims 7 months was mentioned as term of lease as well as date May 1 or April 30. 2. He further claims that he was at least entitled to thirty days' notice. 3. Can he hold them for April rent and, although he has not mentioned me, could he hold me also? H. C. R.

1. If a written contract purports on its face to be a complete expression of the whole agreement, oral understandings incidental to the negotiations are superseded and cannot be proved in court to change the written contract. Where a tenant under a lease for a definite term holds over beyond the term and the landlord accepts additional rent, these circumstances, in the absence of other circumstances showing a contrary intent on the part of the landlord, result in a renewal by implication, so that neither party can terminate the tenancy nor increase the rent during such renewal.

2. While the law is not clearly settled as to proper notice at the end of renewal by implication, we would advise the parties to give 60 days' notice.

3. He would have to look to the person who signed the lease.

THIS KING BUSINESS.

Spain seems to have voted pretty heavily against King Alfonso, but he still is sticking close to his throne. But it's hard from this distance to understand why. There's only a few kings left and they manage to get along by opening flower shows, kissing babies, and not putting their fingers into the government. A big butter 'n' egg man or a college coach or a popular orchestra leader has it all over a king nowadays for popularity and money. Of course, a king gets a great palace to live in, but the old thing is generally damp and run down and without steam heat or an icebox, and a hungry mob standing around in front most of the time making faces at the king and daring him to come out and fight like a man.

An ordinary man, even if he loses his job, is simply fired, that's all, and can quietly go out and try to find another place. But whenever a king gets the air his loving subjects always clamor to chop his hair close down under his ears or exile him to a lonely island or something. He can't put an ad in the papers saying that a man who has had considerable experience kinging for a number of years and knows the business from the ground up, and is a regular go-getter, would like another situation of the same kind, at a reasonable salary to start with, references exchanged. If Alfonso finally has to go he will probably be forced to escape disguised as a blind flower girl, and he'll be in luck if the populace doesn't chase him all the way to the French border. And there's no chance of his organizing a third party and running at the next election as an independent. When a king is through he's all through. When a king is down he's always out. What Alfonso ought to do is to come to the United States and get a job like Cal Coolidge's, writing two-hundred words every day for the front pages of a newspaper syndicate. He can't do that in Spain, for there's not enough of his subjects who can read, but he would probably go strong over here, especially if Cal gets another job, one in Washington, after the November elections in 1932.

SONNET.

Darling, lift up your head. These scalding tears
Have no place on my hands. Lift up your head.
What if I have to go? Nor days nor years
Can be but closing doors behind the dead.
Have you so little faith in love or me
That you must grieve forsaken all your days?
Out of the circle of my arms you see
The world is wide that cherishes our ways.
Look: when the cowslip spangles all the spring,
Think how I would have laughed for April weather,
And when the geese go over, black of wing
Across October skies, we learned together,
Remember how we learned and what we know,
And smile as lovers smile and let me go.

NANCY SHORES.

GOV. EMMERSON vetoed the bill repealing the state prohibition act after the voters of the state issued him a mandate on the subject and the legislature had passed it. If voters could only remember that long it would be a nice pious idea for them to put a veto on Gov. Emmerson the next time he pops up for a job. But the voter is usually a sap and doesn't remember wrongs from here to across the street.

HOW CAN a governor disregard the mandate of the voters of his state? asks you. Well, down in the country the squires make politics their business. Up here in the city the average man doesn't know whether Chicago is a part of Illinois or Indiana. They probably go a-motoring a good deal over to the Sand Dunes, and lots of them are pretty sure we're a part of Indiana. Gov. Emmerson can slap us straight on the nose, and in all probability get by with it. But, by gravy, here's one vote he got before that he'll never get again.

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES of the Rosenwald Industrial museum are hunting, so far in vain, for a director who must have "the scientific knowledge of an Einstein, the educational foresight of Hutchins, and the business ability of an Owen Young. Also he must be a genius, a dreamer, a technologist, an executive, a salesman, and a publicist." There's plenty of men like that on the Boul. Mich. selling patent liver pills or shoelaces. Ask 'em and they'll admit it.

AND NOW they're digging up personal letters that ex-President Harding wrote. Personal letters of a dead man are hard to explain because the one who knows just what they mean can't say a word; and, besides, he may never have written them anyhow. But, anyhow, if they ever intend to dedicate the Harding memorial at Marion they'd better do it this morning at three-thirty or at a quarter after five, at the latest, and have it over with before anybody digs up something else.

COURSERS.

Wherefore so fast, wherefore so fast?
I hear your hoofs that thunder past
And I am fain to stop my ears

LAGNIAPPE.

AN AMERICAN WOMAN writer has been expelled from Russia because she printed a funny story about Stalin. Sez she. The story was that a boy rescued Stalin from drowning not long ago and the Red leader offered him any reward he would ask, telling him who he was. "What," said the boy, "are you Joseph Stalin? Then the only reward I ask is that you never let any one know I saved your life." Mr. Stalin hardly fired the lady out of Russia because the story was funny. He gave her the air because the story was so old that the first time he heard it he kicked the end out of his crib.

AH, 'TIS SPRING, indeed! The baseball season opens today, the circus is here, and the college boys have taken off their coonskin overcoats. All that is wanting now is for a copper to arrest a flapper on the bathing beach for not wearing enough bathing suit. R. H. L.

WONDER IF THE GOVERNOR FULLY REALIZED WHAT HE WAS SAYING?

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 14, 1915.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Great Britain, France, and Russia are unwilling to end the war unless Germany and Austria-Hungary definitely and officially sue for peace. This is the answer of the allies to the statement of the peace terms Germany will consider which was made known unofficially to the United States government last week. The price of peace which the allies demand comprises the evacuation of Belgium, payment to Belgium of an indemnity, cession by Germany of Alsace-Lorraine to France and payment of an indemnity for invasion of French territory, cession to Russia of German Poland, Galicia, and possibly additional Austrian territory, cession to Serbia of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and division of the German colonies in Africa among the allies. German officials here characterize the terms as ridiculous.

LONDON.—Constant French pressure in the San Mihiel region has caused the Germans much concern, according to a dispatch from Amsterdam, and a retreat is being contemplated by the kaiser's forces.

NEW YORK.—Miss Jane Addams headed 39 women who sailed on the liner Noordam to attend the women's international peace convention at The Hague. Other Chicagoans in the party are Mrs. S. P. Breckenridge, Miss Grace Abbott, Dr. Alice Hamilton, Miss Rebecca Shelly, and Mrs. W. S. Thomas.

NEW HAVEN.—For the first time since they came to the parting of the ways, the two ex-Presidents, Col. Roosevelt and Prof. Taft, met at the funeral of their mutual friend, Prof. Thomas Raynesford of Yale university. "How do you do, Theodore," said Prof. Taft, and the two men shook hands.

APRIL 14, 1901.

WASHINGTON.—If the dark complexioned gentlemen who compose the Cuban constitutional convention only knew how much satisfaction their partial rejection of the Platt amendments has given congressmen and officials generally, they would speedily adopt the amendments. There is a general feeling that Cuba must take what is offered or be annexed to the United States. This annexation sentiment in congress is too strong to be overlooked and it is believed the convention may withdraw its action when it finds the United States is firm.

CHICAGO.—Joseph Richter, riding a bicycle without a light, struck and fatally injured Anna Purtill in front of her home, 546 North Clark street. Richter carried the woman into a drug store where she died before a doctor could arrive. The cyclist gave himself up to the police.

CHICAGO.—Racing at the Lakeside track in Indiana will start tomorrow. A fair card is offered. Ald. John Powers is president of the new Worth Jockey club, whose opening race meeting will begin on May 2. The finishing touches have been put on the Worth track and it is complimented by those who have seen it. The track was built several years ago.

APRIL 14, 1881.

CHICAGO.—Strawberries sold on the Chicago market yesterday for 60 cents a quart. They were shipped from Mississippi.

NEW YORK.—Anthony Comstock, agent for the Society for the Suppression of Vice, was indicted on a charge of assault on Fanny D. Hoffman. It is claimed that in 1879 Comstock entered the home of Mrs. Hoffman and accused her of writing indecent letters to neighbors. He showed her the letters, she says, and when she was about to call the police he used violence to force her to return them.

BOMBAY.—Candahar has been evacuated by the British. The Pisheen valley, however, will not be abandoned.

DENVER.—Charles Marmon, a Leadville stage driver who on March 10 shot and killed a peaceable citizen in a theater and gambling house, was taken from jail by unmasked vigilantes and hung to a tree in the presence of several hundred persons.

CHICAGO.—Judge A. W. Tourgee will deliver his lecture on the "Benadhemite Era" in the Methodist church, Evanston, tonight.

THE SUBURBAN DELUSION.

Chicago, April 10.—I notice in today's TRIBUNE an Oak Parker asks, "Why not a city, to be called Westend, extending from Chicago to the county line and from Summit to some place or other?"

I've lived in Chicago 32 years and in Oak Park five years and for the life of me I can't imagine what it is—but it surely is—that makes the suburbanite have such a horror of Chicago. They work here, spend nine-tenths of their time here and their wives are always downtown gadding around, but when it comes to being a part of the city they can't seem to see it. Mayor Cermak surely compares at least equally with any man who collects a few bucks and then gets himself elected mayor or village president or what not. He has a plan of lower taxation, unification of the traction system, a metropolitan police force, etc., that would surely be better than every little area of a half mile square trying to be an individual town. Why not Chicago from the lake to the county line and from somewhere or other on the south to twice as much on the north? The people in the suburbs cheat the grocer and cheat in other ways just as much as the city people; so, really, their air of superiority in a $35 a month stove heated shack is laughable.

I've crossed Austin avenue thousands of times, going west, and, upon my honor, I never noticed the air was any purer on the west side than the east side of the street, and outside of the fact that you get a seat on the Lake street or Garfield "L," while we stand up, what have you got that we haven't?

AUSTINITE.

THE SKINNER SCHOOL.

Chicago, April 6.—The long heralded $13,000 annual report of the board of education is now out. This report contains figures on some of the newest schools in Chicago and compares these schools with the Skinner school, which was built in 1859.

The Skinner school may be a "cheese box," as the report calls it, but after seventy-two years of service it is still standing and in use today. It may not be modern, but how many of these new buildings will be in use seventy years from now? We have several new schools in the city which cannot be used today because they have been condemned. SKINNER ALUMNUS.

NO WINDOW SHADES.

Chicago, April 2.—Think of permitting the surface lines to run their new Clark street cars for almost a year without window shades. I have seen mothers holding babies and small children who could not open their eyes because of the glare of the sun. It is impossible to read or window shop as you ride along because of the glare. Nothing to do but squint and pucker one's forehead.

IRENE WALSH.

THE TRUTH.

Chicago, April 10.—I always have believed that it is not only proper but a duty to tell the truth about people who occupied or seek positions of public trust, whether they be dead or alive. Of course, Thompson is dead politically. Everybody who knows Thompson's doings, both as mayor and as candidate seeking reëlection, will agree that THE TRIBUNE did him no injustice in that editorial yesterday, but described him most accurately. Politicians as a rule are pretty raw, still there are not many who would stoop so low and tell such lies about their opponents as he did.

The people of Chicago owe THE TRIBUNE a great debt of gratitude for Thompson's defeat. If they had heeded THE TRIBUNE'S warnings in 1919 and again in 1927 Chicago would have been spared the disgrace and humiliation which the city suffered due to Thompson's scandalous administration, and the taxpayer would not have suffered the crushing burden which Thompson's rule of waste and graft during twelve long years inflicted upon them.

The services which THE TRIBUNE rendered to the city and the taxpayers in fighting Thompson and in bringing about his defeat should be gratefully appreciated by all good men and women.

N. L. PIOTROWSKI.

LOYALTY TO THOMPSON.

Chicago, April 8.—We who are about to die with William Hale Thompson salute him in defeat. Rather would we go down in oblivion loyal to the man who was loyal to us than rise in triumph through ingratitude. Yes, he carried the "black belt," as you term it, and no better epitaph can be written for the Negro than that he refused to be a traitor and bite the hand that had given him an opportunity to be a man. Never again can it be said against us that we are ungrateful to those who help us and thereby risk their all, for, let me say in conclusion, it was William Hale Thompson's fairness to the Negro, more than any other one thing, that defeated him. LUCY CHURCHILL-HENDERSON.

SPARE PARTS FOR SHIRTS.

Chicago, April 8.—Any shirt company would get all of my business if it extended to me the privilege of buying extra cuffs and collars [for collar attached shirts]. No, this would make shirts last 100 to 500 per cent longer and they would rather sell you a new shirt. R. M. T.

THE INCOME TAX.

Chicago, April 8.—I appreciate very much your stand against the state income tax and your editorial entitled "A Way to Reduce the Farmers' Taxes" was an exceptionally good article. I wish to take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation.

President, Chicago Association of Life Underwriters.

AUSTRALIA SUES OWN STATE FOR DEFAULTING DEBT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CANBERRA, Australia, April 13.—Because Premier Lang of New South Wales defaulted that state's debts by not meeting $3,500,000 in interest to London bondholders on April 1, law authorities of the commonwealth of Australia, representing five states of the six, today secured the issuance of a writ in the high court asking judgment for the full sum of the defaulted bond issues, amounting to $252,525,545, from New South Wales.

The New South Wales government will be allowed fourteen days' time to file an appearance. Premier Lang will be the chief witness for New South Wales, while Prime Minister Scullin and E. G. Theodore, treasurer of the Labor cabinet, will be called to support the claim of the commonwealth.

Had Threatened Suit.

When the Australian commonwealth paid the interest of $3,500,000 to the Bank of England and the Westminster bank upon loans made by New South Wales on the day it was due, it was announced that proceedings would be taken against New South Wales, Premier Lang and other ministers, individually and collectively, to recover the interest.

While repudiating the debt to England, Premier Lang did not default his government's obligations to America.

Premier Lang's repudiation of his government's debts has created a storm in Australia. In attempting to defend his default policy, Mr. Lang said:

"Having to choose between our own people and those overseas, we decided the default should not be against our own citizens.

Lang Defends His Policy.

When he was told that his government could get the amount needed for oversea interest payments, the premier countered by saying:

"My policy was considerate to primary producers, who had been repeatedly informed that the credit available to them was limited because of the demands on the banks by the government.

"If we took the $3,500,000, which the banks offered us, it meant that that amount of credit would be withdrawn from the primary and secondary industries of the state, which would be the final blow to those struggling to keep afloat."

Many leaders in Australia have branded Mr. Lang's policy as "shameful" and "a disgrace to Australia."

Prime Minister Scullin has referred to the repudiation as a "dishonor."

Economists blame the financial condition of New South Wales on fictitious prosperity. They allege money was spent lavishly. Sydney, the capital of New South Wales, was rebuilt. Palatial stores and residences were erected during boom times.

PORTUGAL PLANS TO STARVE REBELS INTO SUBMISSION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LISBON, Portugal, April 13.—The Portuguese government today decided to dispatch further troops to fight the rebels at Madeira and the Azores Islands, in addition to those who sailed yesterday aboard the cruiser Vasco de Gama and the gunboat Limpopo. The steamer Nyassa was commandeered today for transport purposes. The government plans first to seize the Azores and establish a base at Fayal, which is reported not to have gone over to the rebels yet.

If Madeira continues to hold out, the government proposes to blockade the island and starve the rebels into surrender.

Lisbon is quiet with no outward signs of revolt against the government. The position in the provinces, however, is uncertain owing to strict censorship.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 13.—(AP)—Fifty-eight consecutive days have passed with no measurable rain in Los Angeles. This is the longest rainless spell for this season since 1900, when no rain fell between Jan. 6 and March 3.

GIRL, 17, POINTS OUT PANTAGES IN COURTROOM

Tells of Being "Sold" to Wealthy Man.

San Diego, Cal., April 13.—(AP)—Amid heated debate between state and defense counsel and occasional hand clapping from spectators, who were quieted only by threats of a bailiff to "throw you all out," the preliminary hearing of Alexander Pantages and four others on immorality charges began today before Judge Arthur L. Mundo.

Asked to Identify Defendant.

State and defense counsel fell into protracted argument over cross-examination aimed at establishing Miss Nitto's age. Then Miss Livingston was called and asked to identify the defendants. She pointed out William Jobelman, former publicity agent for Pantages, and Mrs. Olive Clark Day, who are accused in Los Angeles of operating a bureau for the sale of girls to wealthy men, and John P. Mills, real estate broker.

"Do you see Mr. Pantages?" the prosecutor asked.

Miss Livingston peered about the courtroom, left the stand and walked through the crowd with Richard Cantillon, a defense attorney, at her heels.

"Please make him sit down," shouted Frank Dunn, deputy district attorney, to the court. "He's tampering with the witness."

Bailiff Roars for Order.

"I'm only trying to help her," retorted Cantillon. A moment later she saw Pantages and the spectators clapped their hands while the bailiff roared for order. She made a similar attempt to locate Jesse Shreve, land promoter and the fifth defendant, but failed, although all defendants were sitting inside the courtroom railing.

The scene upset Miss Livingston and she testified haltingly to details of the party which Miss Nitto earlier had related.

Miss Nitto testified she and Miss Livingston were driven to San Diego by Jobelman, accompanied by Mrs. Day and were aware of the purpose of the trip.

They were taken to a hotel, Miss Nitto said, and introduced to Shreve, who took them to a motion picture show. Later in the evening she said they met Pantages under the name of "Alex Brown."

They returned to the hotel and she said Pantages received a call from the hotel office a few minutes later, after Mills had arrived, informing Pantages that the women could not remain in the room.

Miss Nitto said the others left and she remained with Pantages. The next day the three women returned to Los Angeles. She said Mrs. Day showed her a roll of money and explained the men had arranged "everything."

Both girls told of being offered liquor by the men, but Miss Nitto said she alone did not drink.

Link a N. Y. Strangler Gang to Murder of Three Women

New York, April 13.—[Special.]—Reopening the Dot King and Louise Lawson murder cases today, detectives working on the Vivian Gordon murder were hopeful of solving all three crimes at once if they can find the men who were with Harry Stein, a racketeer, on the night the Seabury vice inquiry witness was strangled. While they worked, the Bronx grand jury indicted Stein on a charge of first degree murder.

The indictment came soon after the discovery that Stein was believed by Commissioner Mulrooney to have been a member of the group of stranglers most under investigation in the two earlier murders.

Stein was in jail when the King and Lawson women were killed, but Commissioner Mulrooney believes his companions on the night of the latest crime had knowledge of the other killings. The commissioner feels his theory is strengthened by the fact that the crime for which Stein was jailed in 1923 was the attempted strangling of a young woman.

Louise Lawson was bound, gagged and smothered to death in her elaborately furnished apartment facing the Museum of Natural History in 1924, and Dot King was bound and gagged and chloroformed in 1923.

All three women were robbed by the slayers and all three were habitues of Broadway night clubs, where they flaunted their furs and jewelry, bought out of mysterious incomes.

Meanwhile Steon refuses to tell the police anything.

"But we have known of him here in the Bronx since he was sentenced in this county for a robbery in the course of which he strangled a woman back in 1921," said Inspector Bruckman.

"And Saturday another woman came to the district attorney's office and told of having been gagged and strangled by a man she thought was Stein. She had seen his picture in the newspapers. We lined up fourteen prisoners in the county jail corridor and brought the woman before the line. Without a moment's hesitation she picked out Stein as the man."

Commissioner Mulrooney said he and his assistants were concentrating their efforts on the stranglers.

HOLD 4 CAPONE AIDS SEIZED AT RAIDED BREWERY

Bert Delaney, alleged chief booze manufacturer of the Capone gang, and three Capone workmen were held in bonds of $5,000 each by United States Commissioner Walker yesterday on charges of complicity in the operation of a huge brewery seized Saturday at 3136 South Wabash avenue.

Delaney and the other defendants, Frank Stewart, James Calloway, and Mike Smith, were trapped Sunday by special prohibition agents under Assistant Chief Elliott Ness, when they appeared at the brewerey and attempted to haul away some of the vats in a 5 ton truck.

Unlike ordinary coffees

Hills Bros Coffee never varies in aroma and exquisite flavor because it is roasted evenly . . . continuously

UNLIKE ORDINARY METHODS, HILLS BROS' PATENTED PROCESS—CONTROLLED ROASTING—ROASTS ONLY A FEW POUNDS AT A TIME. NEVER UNDER-ROASTED OR OVER-ROASTED. JUST RIGHT—ALWAYS!

BLEND alone will not give you a perfect cup of coffee. It's the roasting process that develops the flavor of the blend; and if that process is not exact, there is bound to be variation in flavor.

That's why Hills Bros. invented and patented Controlled Roasting—a continuous process that roasts a few pounds at a time. By this most accurate process, every berry is roasted evenly. Bulk-roasting methods do not insure an even roast.

Hills Bros. Coffee is always fresh because it is packed in vacuum. By this method, air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is taken from the can and kept out. Ordinary cans, even if air-tight, do not keep coffee fresh.

Try Hills Bros. Coffee. Ask for it by name and look for the Arab—the trade-mark—on the can. Sold by grocers everywhere.

STORY REVIVED LINKING WATSON WITH THE KLAN

Reed Committee Witness Appeals Lawsuit.

Washington, D. C., April 13.—[Special.]—The dispute begun in 1926 before the Reed committee of the senate as to whether Senator James E. Watson [Rep., Ind.], majority leader of the senate, did or did not belong to the Ku Klux Klan, was brought to the doorstep of the United State Supreme court today when attorneys for William Rogers announced their intention of appealing Rogers' $50,000 damage suit against Senator Watson and others.

SENATOR JAMES E. WATSON. [Fotograms.]

Those joined with Senator Watson as defendants include M. Bert Thurman, member of the Republican national committee and former collector of internal revenue in Indiana; Albert Ward, former United States district attorney for Indiana, and five others.

It was Rogers who testified before the Reed committee that Senator Watson had admitted membership in the klan.

Old Story Recalled.

Unable to bribe or coerce him into signing a retraction, according to the record prepared for submission to the Supreme court, Rogers claims that the defendants entered into a conspiracy and that one of them forged Rogers' name to a paper denying the story Rogers had told the committee.

The record recalls Senator Watson's campaign for reelection in 1926 and the testimony of Hugh [Pat] Emmons, klan organizer, before the Reed committee in Chicago that Watson had the klan's support, and Watson's denial of any connection with the klan.

In answer to a subpoena, the record states, Rogers appeared before Senator Reed in St. Louis and told how he had gone to Washington to see Senator Watson about a department of justice job. Rogers, so he claims, was a klansman and flashed a klan passport on Senator Watson, he testified, whereupon the senator admitted having one just like it and showed it to him.

Alleges Intimidation.

Senator Watson's reply to Rogers' story was an all inclusive denial. And it was thereafter that the "conspiracy" began, Rogers states. The defendants defamed him, he says, and sought to bribe him and threaten him into signing a retraction.

Then, says Rogers, the defendants tried to have him indicted for perjury.

He claimed the protection of the Reed committee, says Rogers, but got no help. Then he brought suit in the federal district court for $50,000, but the court ruled that it was without jurisdiction.

MACHINE MINDED BELGIAN PRINCE DUE IN U. S. TODAY

Sails Incognito; To Visit Industrial Plants.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, April 13.—(AP)—Always happier in the blue denim of mechanics' overalls than in the royal purple of court attire, Prince Charles of the Belgians has gone to America to study the methods of Thomas A. Edison, Henry Ford, and other industrial geniuses of the new world.

Prince Charles, second son of King Albert, was revealed today as having sailed incognito April 4 on the Red Star steamer Pennland for New York, registering under the name of Charles Derethy. He is scheduled to dock tomorrow.

Hope He Finds Romance.

Fond of everything mechanical, the prince plans to stay two months in America and will visit the Baldwin Locomotive works, the Edison laboratories, and the Ford plant, as well as Niagara falls, Yosemite valley, and other scenic points, traveling to the Pacific coast before he returns.

The prince is a clever engineer, mechanical and locomotive, and an expert automobile repairman. He has often expressed a desire for a working career.

Only 27 years old, he is a bachelor in spite of the fact that the royal family favors a marriage for him. His people are wondering if he will find romance in America as well as mechanical marvels.

Visit Entirely Informal.

Washington, D. C., April 13.—(AP)—The visit of Prince Charles of the Belgians, now en route to the United States, will be entirely informal. The prince will travel incognito and will visit historic places in this country. At the request of the prince himself no official entertainment is planned.

EXCITEMENT RAN HIGH

on March 17 . . . at the start of the elaborate lubrication study conducted by the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association on the Indianapolis Speedway. Read the dramatic details of this tremendous task

NOTHING approaching this lubrication study in size and scope had ever before been attempted. Here were 13 latest model cars of prominent makes ready to start on a series of tests covering thousands of miles—tests that would shed new light on questions concerning dilution, consumption, carbon and wear. More than 4 weeks of intensive work lay ahead for the relays of drivers that would whirl these cars around the Indianapolis Speedway. Months of preparation had worked up to this climax. Drivers waited at their wheels for the word to go. Excitement ran high.

Accuracy in the results obtained is assured. The tests were conducted by the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association. Its official observers were present every minute. The results when compiled will be certified by that unbiased organization.

Early in May, cars used in this test will start on individual tours. They will visit automobile dealers from Michigan to Montana to deliver the certified results and to allow inspection. At the same time they will be gathering lubrication data on highways and city streets, under the exact conditions your car faces. Watch for these cars.

It is by such research methods that this company is able to provide you always with motor oil that meets exactly the lubricating requirements of your engine.

WHEN EYES ARE CONCERNED

Precision in glasses is comparable to purity in drugs and medicine.

You would not buy drugs or medicines from an unskilled or an unvouched-for pharmacist whose only appeal is price!

Is it not therefore equally hazardous to buy from the unskilled, careless and ofttimes unscrupulous dealer in glasses?

You can no more be the judge of the one than of the other. Imperfect and inaccurate lenses, such as are rejected by us and destroyed, are oftentimes sold by others as "first" quality.

Precision made spectacles are not produced and sold at ridiculously low prices. And any other kind may be expensive at any price. Your eyes would have to pay.

Almer Coe glasses are "precision made."

NEW AIR RECORD FOR SPEED MADE BY RUTH NICHOLS

Flies 210 Miles an Hour in Dawn Test.

Detroit, Mich., April 13.—(AP)—Ruth Nichols arose before dawn today and before the sun was well over the horizon had set a new speed record for women of 210.6 miles an hour—yet she termed her feat "the most normal thing in the world."

"There wasn't anything particularly exciting about the flight," the Rye, N. Y., aviatrix said as she made a quick survey of the planes at the National Aircraft show before taking off in mid-afternoon for Cincinnati.

"A slightly quartering breeze made me 'crab' a little in speeding over the course, but there was nothing different from an ordinary flight except a few bad bumps."

Bed Sheets Marked Course.

She made four flights over a three-kilometer course marked by bed sheets along railroad tracks near Grosse Isle airport, reaching a high speed of 226.88 miles an hour on one lap.

Two barographs were in the plane, to be sent to the National Aeronautic association for checking.

Holds Other Records.

Miss Nichols, in capturing the three-kilometer speed laurels formerly held by Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, became joint holder with her borrowed cabin monoplane of records in three different fields.

She is recognized holder of the women's altitude record of 28,743 feet and also is credited with long distance marks for women by her fast transcontinental flights. The same ship, which is owned by Powell Crosley Jr., Cincinnati, was used by William Brock and Edward Schlee in fast flights between Jacksonville, Fla., and the west coast.

Business Men Back Plan for Lincoln Park Airplane Base

BY ROBERT WOOD.

North side business men yesterday pledged their support to the proposed lake front airport and seaplane base in Lincoln park. At a meeting in the New Lawrence hotel the Central Uptown Chicago association endorsed the preliminary plan as outlined by Maj. R. W. Schroeder, manager of Sky Harbor airport, and formed a committee to present the proposal to the Lincoln park commissioners at their meeting a week from today.

The merchants and professional men of the Uptown district had as their guests at the meeting Commissioners Sheldon Clark and Edward L. Stead of the park board and State Representative James McVicker of the 21st district who spoke with enthusiasm of the plan.

The site under consideration is the plot of made land at the foot of Montrose avenue, which will be completed by the middle of the summer. A yacht basin is part of the project and would be suitable for seaplane and amphibian anchorage.

Maj. Schroeder pointed out that at little expense the site can be coverted into a landing field which would serve the loop as well as the north side district and bring within eight minutes of the downtown district a terminal for airplanes of all types.

"The Montrose site couldn't be a better place for an air field if it had been built especially for that purpose," declared Victor J. Curto, who was named head of the association's committee appointed to make a survey on the subject. "The land is practically ready for landing purposes now, and at negligible cost the field can be established without interfering with the park's activities. No permanent improvements would be necessary, and the land can be used for other purposes later on if the air field at that point is found to be impractical.

"Chicago has been talking about a lake front airport for several years," he said. "Here is a ready made, vacant field that provides the means of an excellent experiment with the idea. We can have a centrally located aircraft base for the World's Fair without the expenditure of millions that would be required to build an island in the lake."

SECOND SANITY TRIAL OF SLAYER PRESTON OPENED

The second sanity trial of John Preston, under death sentence for murder, was started yesterday before Judge John K. Newhall at Wheaton.

Preston was saved from execution last January when a jury found him insane and ordered him committed to the Chester asylum. State's Attorney Chauncey W. Reed won a retrial on the grounds the verdict was not justified by the evidence.

Prosecutor Reed and Defense Attorney Eugene L. McGarry selected a jury of seven men and five women within a few hours.

Preston is under sentence for the slaying of Miss Agnes Johnston, a Chicago stenographer. She was attacked and strangled by Preston on Oct. 12, 1929.

'JACK THE RIPPER' ON STAND; TELLS OF HIS MURDERS

Used Scissors in Slaying of Young Girl.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUSSELDORF, Germany, April 13.—Peter Kuerten, known as Germany's "Jack the Ripper," whose crimes terrorized Dusseldorf for more than a year, went on trial here today. He is charged with nine murders, although he has confessed more than 100 other crimes, ranging from arson and burglary to murder.

As he sat in court today, penned in a box from which only his pasty face and shoulders emerged, he presented a harmless appearance as he calmly explained how his victims were easily lured to their doom. The trial is being held in the former gymnasium of the Bejrendorf police station, as the Dusseldorf court is too small to hold the scores of experts and 150 witnesses who have bene summoned to give evidence. Eighty reporters from countries throughout the world are reporting the trial.

Try to Hold Trial Secret.

Early in today's proceedings the public prosecutor sought to have the trial heard in camera. He said he feared that Kuerten's crimes, if made public, would evoke a wave of public wrath. The defending lawyer, Dr. Wehner, urged that the world must be given a picture of "this terrible creature." The judge ruled that the public be temporarily admitted.

The entire day was spent in listening to Kuerten's tale of his life. In well chosen words, he gave details of his childhood of poverty and misery. His drunken father, he said, was repeatedly jailed for various offences.

Kuerten's first murder, he said, was committed in 1913 when he strangled 11 year old Christine Klein, whose uncle narrowly escaped the death penalty for the crime. His passion for killing was climaxed in 1929 when a series of murders of women and children in the Dusseldorf area terrorized the population.

Tells of Crimes.

Occasionally tapping a blue folder, in which he had neatly outlined the details of his crimes, Kuerten told how he used hamers, knives, or scissors to kill his victims.

"Gentlemen," he said, "the first case in which I used a hammer as a weapon was that of Ida Reuter. The handle broke off. I got acquainted with her at a railroad station. I knocked her down on the railroad crossing before Oberkassel. It was as usual. I first strangled her, clubbed her with a hammer, and pulled her down in a gulley. I could not throw her into the Rhine, as I meant to, because a man who looked like a policeman came along."

He also told of the murder of 5½ year old Gertrude Alberman.

"I met Gertrude as she was leaving her house," he said. "I had pocketed a scissors when I left home, feeling that I must do something. I saw the little girl come down the street. I took her along and we followed the factory fence. Then I thought of strangling her. I did as usual and then I stuck her with scissors. I had not done that before. I stabbed her often and when she was dead I left the body lying there."

Reads Bible in Cell.

Kuerten, who now claims he has "got religion" and spends his time in his cell praying and reading the Bible, told how he used to visit the scenes of his outrages. His only plea as an excuse was that he was driven to seek revenge on society for the severity of his treatment in German prisons, in which he spent 20 of his 47 years for burglaries and assaults.

AUTO THIEF WINS PROBATION.

John Genowitz, 18 years old, 2142 West 51st street, was placed on probation yesterday by Judge Allegretti of the Boys court when he admitted that he had stolen an automobile to take two of his friends riding.

BEAUTY, HELD FOR KILLING HUSBAND, DENIED FREEDOM

NICE, France, April 13.—(AP)—Mrs. Charlotte Nixon-Nirdlinger, awaiting trial here for the killing of her husband, Fred G. Nirdlinger, Philadelphia theater magnate, will not be granted a temporary release from prison, Magistrate Vachier, who is investigating the case, announced today.

This was believed to mean that the former St. Louis beauty queen may stand trial at the May session of the court instead of being bound over to the August session. It had been planned to release her on bail to save her from spending the hot summer in jail.

The beauty's lawyers have agreed not to ask her release. Meanwhile, translators, working night and day, are going over hundreds of letters giving various impressions of the Nixon-Nirdlinger's family life.

Bathe the affected parts with hot water for 2 or 3 minutes, then rub briskly with Muscletone.

STIFF JOINTS
Rub Muscletone thoroughly over affected joints and repeat frequently. Quicker results can be obtained if affected joints are first treated with hot applications—preferably moist heat, i. e., hot towels.

HEADACHE

PHYSICAL EXHAUSTION
Lie in tub of warm water for 5 minutes. Be careful water is not too hot to be enervating. Then follow with gentle massage with Muscletone applied freely.

SORE MUSCLES and 'Charleyhorse'
Apply Muscletone to sore parts. Then massage briskly. If trouble is deep-seated, apply every hour.

Muscletone should be used externally only. It is not a medicine, but it is a most efficacious liniment with a peculiar ability to remove pain in muscles and joints. One trial—money back if not completely satisfied—will thoroughly convince you of the remarkable, beneficial processes of Muscletone. Keep a bottle in your home.

J. L. McK., 516 E. 33rd Place, Chicago, Ill.—"Having decided to sell my oil burner and use coal, I tried several selling plans but was unable to get a single prospect for my burner. Then I decided to try a Chicago Tribune want ad. On September 12, 1930, I paid $2.85 for a want ad to appear in the following Sunday's Tribune. The want ad clerk advised me as to the most effective and economical way to word my message in which I described the oil burner, named my price, and gave my telephone number. Before 3 p. m. that Sunday I received four phone calls, three of these persons came to look at the burner and the second party agreed to pay my price upon delivery. To sell the unusual try Chicago Tribune want ads!"

GERALD G. LASCOE, 7643 East End Ave., Chicago, Ill.—"In the early part of 1923 I was employed by a haberdasher on the south side. The opportunity of advancement was impossible due to the fact that the owner and I were the only two working in the store. During my spare time I had a habit of reading the want ads in the Tribune. On May 2, 1923, I noticed an ad for a haberdashery salesman inserted by the Bedford Shirt Company. I applied for the position and was one of the fortunate ones selected. This ad was the turning point in my life, for today, after eight years, I hold the position of assistant general manager of our chain of 18 stores. Had it not been for this habit of turning to the Tribune want ads whenever seeking employment or advancement I would have missed the opportunity."

MRS. J. B. T., 187 Calhoun St., Aurora, Ill.—"I know from experience that Tribune want ads bring the best results. Due to business I was obliged to sell my Steinway grand piano. After several unsuccessful attempts to sell it through our local paper I inserted a want ad in the Sunday Tribune and on Monday morning sold my piano."

WM. J. S., 1329 Burnham Bldg., Chicago, Ill.—"It was in October, 1929, that I advertised a certain building for trade in the Chicago Tribune—in fact, two other papers also. But thanks to the Tribune, for it was one reply from the Tribune that made it possible for me to receive $2,400.00 in commission, this commission made it possible for me to take care of my mother's illness, which meant more to me than words can express. I have enjoyed many commissions from Tribune advertising because I believe the more serious minded people read it."

MRS. H. H., 1726 North Shore Ave., Chicago, Ill.—"Last fall my sister from Detroit wired me she was coming to Chicago and asked to stay with me. As I couldn't refuse her, it meant we must find a larger apartment without delay and at the same rent, $65, for we couldn't afford to pay any more. With both of us working every day we didn't have much chance to hunt a place, so I picked up the Tribune and looked over its 'To Rent' columns. There was a four-room apartment that seemed suitable, so we went to see it that same evening. It was just what we wanted, and more, for not only do we have the extra space for the same money, but the lease here provides that at its expiration the furniture of the apartment is ours."

America's greatest home market

ALERT MANUFACTURERS are selling—market to market—this year.

Blind coverage—blind buying of advertising is past. It's too costly.

Only where sales opportunities exist, will money be spent.

Ten or twelve great city markets will normally absorb 80% of most manufacturers' products.

Why try to reach beyond these great, responsive cities for the scattered hard-to-sell 20%. Why not put every ounce of selling and advertising pressure into markets that can buy your goods in quantities?

Standing out in bold relief against the merchandising horizon of America is A. B. C. Philadelphia and suburban area with its 843,000 families—3,709,000 people—all residing within 44 miles of historic City Hall.

Here, is a market deserving and demanding first consideration because it is America's first home market.

Homes! Not apartment houses or apartment hotels.

Homes! More than 300,000 separate dwellings within the city proper and approximately the same number within the A. B. C. suburban area.

Homes! Where there is a steady and ever-increasing demand for oil-burners, mechanical refrigeration, electric ranges, radios—for anything and everything that adds to the enjoyment of living.

Homes! Maintained and occupied by typical American Families—the greatest home-owning group of people to be found in any major market.

Where can you match such a sales opportunity as this? The more you study the picture the more vivid and compelling it becomes. Plan now to strike a smashing, crashing blow that will "capture" completely the buying power that awaits you here!

You can't do it with one newspaper because no single newspaper has sufficient coverage. You can do it with the Curtis-Martin group of Philadelphia newspapers—The Morning, Evening and Sunday Public Ledger and The Morning and Sunday Inquirer. These great newspapers not only provide 100% coverage of the city and suburbs but give the advertiser a substantial plus of readers outside of the A. B. C. area who are influenced by, and respond to, Philadelphia advertising.

You should have all the facts concerning this remarkable merchandising opportunity.

HARDING "SPY" LETTERS LAID TO TOWN GOSSIP

Marion Woman Says She Was the "Carrie."

Marion, O., April 13.—(AP)—"Small town gossip" was blamed tonight for the anxiety expressed by President Harding, while he was a senator, over rumored war time pro-German utterances of Mrs. Carrie Phillips, Marion society woman.

Mr. Harding's anxiety was mentioned in two letters made public for the first time by Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, noted New York collector. Mrs. Phillips said today that she was the "Carrie" who, the letters said, had been "under the eye of government agents."

Mrs. Phillips, who is the wife of James E. Phillips, Marion merchant, laughed when the letters were read to her. She said she had been under the surveillance of government agents during the war as a result of spy hysteria fomented in her case by gossip.

Calls Affair Absurd.

"The entire affair was so absurd that Mr. Harding's anxiety, although well intentioned, was unnecessary," Mrs. Phillips said. "I never made any pro-German remarks and the government agents soon discovered I had not."

Mr. Harding's letters were addressed to "Jim," but there was no other intimation of his identity. They were signed "W. G. H." The only clew in them to Mrs. Phillips was the mention of her name, "Carrie," but when the letters were read to her she said, "There is no doubt that I am the 'Carrie' referred to."

Mr. Harding had written that "Carrie" and "Isobelle," (who Mrs. Phillips said was her daughter) should not go to Washington or New York at that time "because it might add new suspicions."

Had Foreign Guests.

Mrs. Phillips said the gossip that started the "pro-German" report was connected with her entertainment at her home here of some friends of her daughter from France and Switzerland. The daughter, mentioned as "Isobelle," in the letters, is Mrs. William H. Mathee, wife of a former consul to Switzerland.

"Apparently, over-patriotic residents of Marion resented the fact that Europeans were guests at my home during war time," Mrs. Phillips said. "The whole thing was silly."

Mrs. Phillips said the then Senator Harding's letters were written out of "neighborly interest." Mr. and Mrs. Harding and Mr. and Mrs. Phillips had been life-long friends and once made a trip around the world together. Mathee, the former consul to Switzerland, was appointed to that post while Harding was President.

REPORT BRITAIN AND CHINA IN AGREEMENT TO END EXTRALITY

SHANGHAI, April 13.—That negotiations between China and Great Britain have progressed sufficiently to enable a settlement of the extraterritoriality issue is forecast by a report from Nanking stating that Sir Miles Lampson, British minister, will arrive there from Peiping next Saturday for the purpose of definitely settling the question.

An authoritative report said that Arthur Henderson, British foreign secretary, has withdrawn most of the British objections to the abolition of extraterritoriality, only insisting that the Chinese government grant special guarantees for the protection of large foreign communities in China, particularly at Shanghai.

FARMERS AGREE TO HALT REVOLT ON COW TESTING

Iowa City, Ia., April 13.—[Special.]—Gov. Dan Turner who had been in conference here all afternoon with the farmers of Cedar county opposing the enforcement of the bovine tuberculin test law, returned to Des Moines tonight without amplifying his statement that the law would be enforced. When the farmers left the conference room they declined to talk but a report was current, which was not denied, that the farmers had agreed to call a mass meeting to decide when and how the testing would continue. They were agreed, according to reports that the governor was right in insisting that the law should be enforced, and that testing would continue.

It was agreed that the state agents would be called off. The farmers are insisting that the Davis bill, now in the legislature, be reported out for passage so that they can get a line on the legislators voting against it in order to defeat them in the next election.

Harold, Beezie Offer Dinosaur Bones for Sale

FOR SALE—PART OF CHASSIS OF dinosaur. Every bone shows signs of much wear and use. Will sell outright for $7.00 cash, or swap for set of Ford springs (1922 model) and commutation ticket good for 10 rebunks at Jones Sugar Bowl. Teen & Binks, specialists in ossified antiques. Call Covina 000—ring 4.

What! Dinosaurs discovered in Covina! We might have accepted it as true if the recent discovery of Harold Teen and Beezie Binks, whose recent adventures, heard over W-G-N, had been substantiated by further investigation. Harold and Beezie had the whole town holding its breath awaiting the outcome of their discovery. Being shrewd business men, they decided to cash in on their discovery while interest in it was at highest pitch. Therefore they spent some of their allowance money to have the above want ad printed in the Want Ad Tribune. Confidentially, the editor thought all the while these dinosaur bones once belonged to Hannigan's cow that disappeared one day last summer after having been seen near the quarry at the edge of town.

We Would Like to See More of These!

Spring Brings Travel Urge, and Books, Too

Lure of Spain Rules in This Group.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

THESE are the sort of days when something in one's blood cries out for far places, the calm and rejuvenating season, or even a good rough smashing sea that knocks you down and miraculously acts the part of mother earth to your Antens complex and returns you to yourself with seven times your old strength. All of the romantic spots on earth grow infinitely desirable. You want to be in some new place, any place but where you are. So you take one of an assortment of vicarious trips. You walk in the park and look at the tiny buds on the lilac bushes and suddenly there come to you the woods of Chantilly in the early spring, with their feathery wisps of the palest green.

CIARA LAUGHLIN.

You go to the Art institute and look at pictures of far places, or even near ones, transmuted by an artist's touch. You lean over the edge of the bridge and before your eyes a funnel of a stationary ship becomes alive with smoke, which floats off far horizontal. You walk over to the lake front. Farther than your eyes can see—your mind pictures Japan, with its wisteria and plum blossoms on the other side of the Pacific.

Spain has at the moment a special claim for so many of us that it seems only humane to give you a few hints as how to travel in Spain if it's really "Castles in Spain" you want. There have been five books lately which are manna to us.

First of all there is Clara Laughlin's "So You're Going to Spain" [Houghton-Mifflin]. I say first of all, because it seems to me that Miss Laughlin's "So You're Going" books are the essential volumes for any traveler in any of the countries and cities which she has already made alive, not only to travelers themselves, but to stay at homes. "Paris, England, France, Italy, Rome, Germany, and Austria," she has brought them all nearer to her readers than perhaps they could bring them to themselves. For Miss Laughlin is a combination guide, philosopher, and friend. All of the statistics which not too intense study demand are to be found in her books, written as if she were telling you about them instead of in cold figures. And not only do you get the historical background, without too much elaboration, but you get the contrast of the present with the past, and that vivifies both of them.

Then she tells you such mundane things as where to eat and live and how much you ought to be laying down in the coin of the realm—that realm—for varying degrees of luxury, and at what hours you get the greatest thrill out of romantic spots—it isn't ALWAYS moonlight!

"Whatever your tastes," she says, "I'd say go to Spain if you can. Even though you may have a weakness for gambling, I can't help believing that you will find a great deal of romance there, whether the romance that makes your heart beat faster is God's creation or man's, the glory of other days, or the sense of being alive in a very wonderful time."

And that feeling Henry Albert Phillips had, and sets down for you in his "Meet the Spaniards" [Lippincott], which will be published on Thursday, but which you may order now. It is about the Spanish people as well as the Spanish landscape, both of which he found entrancing. He says he hopes his book "will not be interpreted precisely as a Treatise or a History, a Guide Book, or a Travel Book, but simple as a Me-Book—My Book of Spain." He took with him a vast enthusiasm for his trip. He brought away, and gives to his readers, an even vaster one!

"Four Ladies in Spain," by Gertrude B. Leeming and Winifred B. Bell [Brentano's], tells what they did and the places they saw, all as other would do them and see them. It is a pleasant narrative, not a book to be read if one were concentrating on only one aspect, but another point of view from any of the others. As Phillips says in his book: "While it shall be a sort of sentimental journey through Spain, disclosing not only what I see but also what I feel about what I see, which shall give me all the freedom and diversity of seven people looking at the moon, each of whom is moved by a totally different emotional vision and each would tell you about HIS moon. But it would all be the same old moon. And so it shall ever be about old Spain, which as the moon stirs and moves reveals beholders each according to his temper or temperament until we have a gallery of Spanish pictures and each happily no two alike."

"Four Ladies in Spain" has its value in the description of the moon. E. M. Newman's latest travelogue is "Facing Spain and Morocco." It was published a few months ago. It is but another angle on the moon—same with photographs and straightforward description.

"Never Seek and Golden Cities" [Frederick Parkinson Keyes [Liveright] is about what she calls "a joyous journey through Latin lands." The lands include Spain, Portugal, and the republics of South America, and there is only one chapter on Spain. It is not a descriptive one of the country at all, but of the participation of America in the Ibero-American exposition at Seville.

Mrs. Keyes, who is a well known author and the wife of a United States senator, writes with experienced ease.

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

This is Mary Astor's picture! She's a beautiful sight to see from start to finish of the film and does a splendid job of acting. As Mary Linden she will show you how Weak Woman can conquer Strong Man when she puts her brain to the task. And the work this astute young woman lays out for herself is no sinecure!

When Mary starts operations on her diamond, he is certainly rough! By the time the picture ends he's pretty well polished and you know that, with the finishing touches he'll receive day by day in every way, he'll be in time a Man Worth Meeting.

"Behind Office Doors" is one of those stories about a girl and her employer, with a slightly different twist from the rank and file of "office wife" yarns. It's well directed. The supporting cast plays up well to the leading lady's shining central performance.

Had that s. c. p., been negative, this film would not, I fear have rated high; but Miss Astor's characterization rounds it out and makes it plausible and consistently entertaining.

"CRACKED NUTS."

Produced by RKO.
Directed by Edward Cline.
Presented at the State-Lake theater.

THE CAST.

Wendell Graham ..... Bert Wheeler
Zander Ulysses Parkhurst ..... Robert Woolsey
Betty Harrington ..... Dorothy Lee
Aunt Minnie ..... Edna May Oliver
Carlotta ..... Leni Stengel
Gen. Bogardus ..... Stanley Fields
King Oscar ..... Harvey Clark
Revolutionist ..... Boris Karloff

KIND—Much ado about little.
QUALITY—Fair.
FUNNY—If you think so.
ACTING—Wheeler and Woolsey ARE—Wheeler and Woolsey. They're smart fellows and A-1 entertainers given a proper vehicle. This one isn't much help to their talents. The inimitable Edna May Oliver does somewhat for the comic good of their cause, though she, too, is hampered by lines and situations. I do love that woman!

DIRECTION—Not bad.

STORY—Starts in America. Carries its characters over to one of those mythical European countries. Here Messrs. Wheeler and Woolsey vie for throne honors. Miss Oliver is seen as an "Aunt Minnie" who doesn't want her niece—colorlessly portrayed by Dorothy Lee—to marry Mr. Wheeler.

REMARKS — Trick photography helps out a bit in spots. "Cracked Nuts" would have been more effective as a two reeler.

See you tomorrow!

Bird and Arbor Day on Friday in Rural Schools

Children in rural Cook county will observe Arbor and Bird day on Friday. That was announced yesterday by Edward J. Tobin, county superintendent of schools. The schools will be dismissed at 2:30 o'clock for the planting of a tree in each school yard. Exercises will be conducted by the Achievement club in each school.

"The motto of Cook county's schools is 'Learn to do by doing'," said Mr. Tobin. "It is also the motto of the Achievement clubs. The securing of young trees for planting and special exercises will help exemplify this motto. School directors and board members will purchase trees suitable for the occasion and region. These trees, recommended by nurserymen, are maple, elm, ash, mulberry, walnut, poplar, locust, oak, willow, catalpa, and tree of heaven."

Mr. Tobin urged the boys and girls to make bird houses, especially for "the little chattering wren," out of cigar boxes and empty cans.

Gov. Emmerson in February proclaimed April 17 and Oct. 16 as Arbor and Bird days in Illinois, requesting the people of the state to consider on these days the conservation and propagation of tree and bird life.

THOMAS JEFFERSON HAILED AS ARCHITECT, MUSICIAN, SAVANT

Charlottesville, Va., April 13.—(AP)—A little known side of Thomas Jefferson was emphasized today at his birthday anniversary celebration at Monticello. Jefferson, third President of the United States, exponent of free-of thought, and able architect, also was a musician.

And Monticello, the Jefferson home, this afternoon was the focal point of a pilgrimage of musicians, officers of the Virginia State Choral Festival association, which will present a four-day out-of-door program, here this week, were guests of honor at the annual Jefferson reception.

Michael Macwhite, minister of the Irish Free State to the United States, also a guest of honor and speaker at the University of Virginia founders' day program this morning again eulogized the Virginia statesman.

"We who live on the other side of the Atlantic owe much more to the political philosophy of Jefferson than is generally realized," said Mr. Macwhite. "The fact that we have so many liberal governments in Europe is due directly to the teachings of Jefferson. The Irish Free State is only one of the governments based on his writings and political theories."

Today was the 188th anniversary of Jefferson's birth and was also the occasion for celebrating the 112th anniversary of the granting of a charter to the University of Virginia, which Jefferson fathered.

Methodist Group Would Let Doctors Aid Birth Control

New York, April 13.—[Special.]—Proposals for legislation giving doctors wider powers in giving information regarding birth control were approved today by vote of ministers attending a meeting of the New York east conference of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Concerning birth control, the conference affirmed this resolution:

"We recommend such legislation as will permit a physician to render medical information on the subject."

The report drew attention to the doctor's bill which would permit the giving of information which, the report read, "would be in accord with the highest principles of eugenics and the best health of the individual."

Concerning capital punishment, the report said it should be abolished "because it is inhuman and unchristian."

Southern Bishop Fears Church Invasion of Homes.

Birmingham, Ala., April 13.—(AP)—Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, president of the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, issued a statement today criticising the committee representing the Council of Churches of Christ in America for its recent action on the subject of birth control.

"I wish to register my protest against the impropriety of the recent publication of the committee on the subject," he said. "This committee represents nobody but itself, and it certainly does not represent the Methodist church.

"However undesirable it is for children to be born in excessive numbers in families that are unprepared to nurture and care for them, this is not a matter for the paternal intervention of the church.

"Such officious invasion of the sacred realm of the home is dangerous in the extreme and in the end will promote more promiscuous sexual relations. It is blasting at the foundations of the home, which is the bulwark of civilization and society, whether it is so intended or not."

DR. MANN WARNS OF INTOLERANCE AMONG VARIED FAITHS

One of the main troubles with religion today is that most of it merely is the history of some other person's religion. So contended Dr. Louis L. Mann, professor of oriental languages at the University of Chicago. He also is rabbi of Chicago Sinai congregation. He spoke yesterday before the Baptist ministers of Chicago at Immanuel Baptist church about "What Ails Religion?"

"One important thing ailing religion today," Dr. Mann said, "is that the churches are trying to satisfy hungry men with the photograph of a beefsteak. People are beginning to want the real thing instead of its picture or its history. They no longer wish some other person's religion, good as it may have been for him. They want their own. It is not enough to stand where Moses, Isaiah, Jesus, Mohammed or Buddha stood, but where they would have stood were they alive today."

Charities Given Col. Friedsam's $15,000,000

Kin Get $650,000 by New Yorker's Will.

New York, April 13.—[Special.]—Except for specific bequests to relatives and friends totaling $50,000, the entire estate of the late Col. Michael Friedsam, estimated at between $15,000,000 and $25,000,000, was left to charity in his will filed today in surrogates' court. Col. Friedsam was president of B. Altman & Co., Fifth avenue department stores concern.

The $10,000,000 art collection of Col. Friedsam, which contains some very valuable old masters, will be offered to the Metropolitan museum or whichever other museum that agrees to accept it intact, under the terms of the will.

The matter of distributing the wealth for charitable purposes was left by Mr. Friedsam to his executors, who are Edward J. Steiner, his brother-in-law; Clarence W. Wood, a friend; and John Stephen Burke, vice president of B. Altman & Co.

In his instructions as to the administration of his estate Mr. Friedsam provided that it is "to be applied by them [the executors] in their best judgment and discretion to such charities and benevolent institutions and institutions of learning for the general uses and purposes of such institutions as my said trustees may select and in such sums as they may think proper."

In the event that no art museum agrees to accept the art collection on Mr. Friedsam's terms, the executors are empowered after five years to sell it and distribute the proceeds through the estate to charity.

Mr. Friedsam's stock in B. Altman & Co. is made available to the department store employés on terms agreeable to the executors. He also made a specific bequest of $20,000 to the Mutual Benefit association of B. Altman & Co.

The largest specific bequest was of $250,000 cash and his household effects to Mrs. Alice Steiner, his niece, and a trust fund of $250,000 which Mrs. Steiner may dispose of at her death. To his nephew, Morris M. Friedsam, Mr. Friedsam left $150,000.

There were smaller bequests to the executors and to a few friends among the employés of B. Altman & Co.

Besides directing that the bulk of his estate go to charity, Mr. Friedsam also made bequests of $20,000 each to the following institutions: New York Foundling hospital, Hebrew Orphan asylum of New York City, Montefiore Hospital for Chronic Diseases, the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies, the Salvation Army, and the Catholic Charities.

Nippon Prince, Princess Visit at West Point

Dine with Commandant, Review Cadets.

West Point, N. Y., April 13.—(AP)—All honors of the United States Military academy were given today to a youthful visitor wearing the uniform of the imperial Japanese navy, Prince Takamatsu.

A U. S. detsroyer, the Evans, carried the prince and princess up the Hudson to West Point. It was their first departure from New York City, where they arrived a few days ago on a round-the-world tour. There the receptions and other honors had taken their time.

They arrived here at mid-day. Maj. Gen. William R. Smith, superintendent of the academy, met the royal visitors and their suite. A troop of cavalry escorted them to the general's headquarters for luncheon. Twenty-one guns boomed a salute as the visitors reached the level of the plain.

After luncheon the prince and princess met members of the academic board and their wives in Memorial hall. An automobile tour through the post ended at the cadet chapel, the walls of which are lined with the flags of many a battle. A fifteen minute organ recital was given by Frederick C. Mayer.

Prince and Princess Takamatsu then reviewed the cadet corps, the prince showing great pleasure at the precision and military bearing of the student officers.

Ingenious Devices Are the Rule at The Patent Show

About 1,000 inventions, ranging from a patent milk bottle holder for babies to a golf club designed to insure a golf ball traveling in the direction intended, are on display at the International Patent Exposition at the Merchandise Mart. The exposition, designed to allow manufacturers wishing new articles to put on the market to get in touch with inventors and their products, will close Sunday night.

There are all manner of queer contraptions from practically every state in the nation and from a number of foreign countries. One man was exhibiting a device which he said is equally valuable as a means of saving skaters breaking through thin ice and as a life belt for ships.

THE STAGE

THE trustees of the Art institute may be considering the abandonment of the Goodman Repertory company, according to rumor; but the prosperity of "The Sacred Flame," now in performance, suggests that they may change their minds. This drama by W. Somerset Maugham is causing the briskest box office activity of the season at the Goodman, and the date of its closing has been advanced from next Sunday to April 26.

A bulletin from the Goodman's management carries this optimistic announcement:

"The current year has proved the most profitable since the theater has been in operation. The attendance has been more than double that of any previous season."

A statement from the trustees regarding the repertory company—continuance or abandonment—will probably be issued within the next fortnight. If professional stage activities are halted, the playhouse will be used as a focal point for amateur theatrical groups, and the school of acting will be retained.

The sojourn of "Lady in Pawn" at the Majestic theater will end next Saturday night. Guy Bates Post and his associates will then take the play on tour through the west, under the auspices of Ralph T. Kettering, with the hope of reaching the Pacific coast. Mr. Kettering promises to stage an intimate musical show called "Ten O'Clock Town" at the Majestic if "Lady in Pawn" prospers on the road. He thinks that Chic Sale would be the right man for stellar honors in this venture.

Lenore Ulric and "Pagan Lady" will remain on view at the Erlanger theater only until April 25. Other cities are asking for a glimpse of this popular actress. The Erlanger will pull down its shutters for a while, to reopen with "Fine and Dandy," on May 4 or May 11. This production, with Joe Cook as its star, has been one of the most emphatic successes of the New York season, in the song and dance division.

When "Three Little Girls" leaves Chicago, two weeks hence, it will head toward St. Louis, where it will be the first offering of a summer season of light opera under municipal auspices. This is an honor which St. Louis usually bestows upon the outstanding operetta of the year. "Nina Rosa," last year's long run show at the Great Northern, was given similar recognition.

The Chicago record of "Three Little Girls" will be thirty-two weeks, in a period of business depression. One must count back four years to find a musical show which equaled or surpassed this achievement. "The Desert Song" ran at the Great Northern for thirty-seven weeks in 1927. Before that, there was "The Vagabond King," which had thirty-two weeks; and "The Student Prince," the champion of them all, which flourished for fifty-nine weeks.

S. M. Biddell, producer of "The Ninth Guest," at the Adelphi theater, is first in the field with the announcement of a play for next fall. It is a comedy called "Divorce Me, Dear," written by Kathryn Roberts, known chiefly as Jane Cowl's press agent. Mr. Biddell plans for a summer tryout in Atlantic City, and says that he will then send the play to Chicago.

A STRAIN ON THE FAMILY TIE

World Session of Blind Opens in New York

Helen Keller Lauds U. S. to Foreign Delegates.

NEW YORK, April 13.—[Special.]—Delegates from thirty-seven nations, in response to a call from President Hoover, convened tonight in International house on Riverside drive. This was the opening session of the first world conference on work for the blind, and the delegates were formally welcomed in messages from President Hoover, ex-President Coolidge, and Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Helen Keller, internationally known blind and deaf lecturer and writer; her teacher, Mrs. Anne Sullivan Macy; Thomas P. Gore, blind senator of Oklahoma; M. C. Migel, president of the American Foundation for the Blind; delegates from England, Sweden, and Italy, and others joined in lauding the cause for which they were assembled.

"Because this country is rich in material things, superficial critics dwell on our materialism," Miss Keller said in her address of welcome. "They say our God is the dollar and our ideal is to get rich at any cost to the spirit. But I am confident that as you travel from one great city to another and visit out institutions and schools you will discover something else besides noise, speed and commercialism.

"Triumphs of wealth and mechanism you will see, but above and beyond them there is something at work in us that is altruistic and spiritual. If you look underneath the superstructure of American materialism you will find thousands upon thousands of men and women who are giving of their best to the principle of coöperation and whose joy is in service to others.

"I believe our deepest desire is world amity. Unless we are willing to join hands internationally, no single nation can accomplish all of which it is capable for the welfare of its people."

Miss Keller felt that the conference offered an opportunity to found a federation to carry knowledge that would prevent unnecessary blindness throughout the world. She emphasized the needs of 6,000,000 sightless for aid towards rehabilitation, and said the responsibility of "an uncompromising fight for the welfare of all the blind" rested on those participating in the conference.

Mr. Migel pointed to the dictaphone, the phonograph, and the radio as scientific inventions which had particular interest for the blind. A device which will run continuously for thirty-three minutes and reproduce twenty-three pages of an ordinary printed book, he said, had been recently perfected, and may eventually replace Braille books, with a saving in cost of production and space.

Mr. Migel told of improvements made in medical treatment of children at birth to prevent blindness, and of advancement made in the work of conserving vision.

A report of the committee on relief of the American Association of Workers for the Blind favored provision for "static" relief for government funds, local and state, each on a 50 per cent basis, and provision on the same basis for "constructive" relief, "relying on private philanthropy, operating through duly authorized agencies for the blind, to supplement suc hactivities and to develop new fields of research and opportunity."

"Static" relief would provide food, shelter and clothing for helpless blind persons, and "constructive" relief would aid in rehabilitation, education, and other means for self-support.

Run Housework on Business Basis, Urged at Conference

New York, April 13.—[Special.]—Organization of housework on a business basis was the theme of numerous reports at today's meeting of the National Committee on Employer-Employé Relationships in the Home. The group includes government officials, representatives of social organizations, university scholars, and practicing house workers.

Such topics as "social case work for household employers with twisted personalities" were touched on. The group has discarded the titles of "maid" or "servant" in favor of "household employé." The committee was formed in Washington in 1928.

Dr. Hazel Kyrk of the University of Chicago headed a committee that argued that the skill of an employé should be determined through standard forms, filled in by the employer "before the employment is terminated."

Unskilled or semi-skilled workers," it continues, "should receive a minimum wage that meets the cost of living of independent women at a tolerable level."

Wages of colored workers should be equal to those of white workers of equal competence. Skilled workers should receive more than the minimum, it adds.

Yankees Play Better, Hoover Says; Lauds Well Used Leisure

Washington, D. C., April 13.—(AP)—President Hoover today told the National Recreation association that during its 25 years existence the work it had done had been "a most significant and magnificent part in the whole recreational development of the country."

Its work today, he said, is of increasing importance, because of the growing congestion of cities on one hand and the increasing leisure of people on the other.

The association met in the cabinet room at the White House. It was organized there 25 years ago today at the instance of President Roosevelt.

"Every progress in constructive recreation for leisure time," the President said, "not only improves health but also morale."

Fairy Tales Are Best Kept Away from Young Child

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

It is always interesting to me to receive letters from parents who do some independent thinking about the books they give their children. I am glad to use the following letter, as the subject is an important one and one which should be discussed here every once in so often.

"Dear Mrs. Bevans: My boy, who was 5 years this month, received as a birthday gift a book of fairy tales. 'Once Upon A Time,' a book of old time fairy tales, is edited by Katherine Lee Bates, professor of English literature, Wellesley college. The literature, of course is of the very best, and the pictures by Margaret Evans Price, are lovely.

"But to me there is something rather gruesome about parts of some of the stories, and we would like your opinion as to whether you think they would harm a child's thoughts."

This mother's feeling about the suitability of the book for her small boy is entirely right. It should be kept until he is 8 or 9, or exchanged, if possible.

The subject of fairy tales for little children has been discussed here quite fully more than once. "Fairy tales and children" are linked in our minds. We are always apt to associate them, and if we've never thought about it especially, to feel that children of any age should have fairy tales read to them.

As a matter of fact, fairy tales—that is, the folklore fairy tale like the old English ones and those of Grimm and Andersen—are not at all for little children. We don't deny their beauty, their picturesqueness, their classic quality. But they are frequently gruesome, frequently deal with the more violent and baser emotions like jealousy, hatred, avarice, cruelty, and are on the whole much too "strong medicine" for little children. Originally of course, they were not for children.

Crochet Yoke Revival Seen in Paris Suits

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Probably the most exciting feature of the new Paris fashions is the use of brand new varieties of fabric; the revival of forgotten favorites such as grandpapa's alpaca and grandmama's Japanese cotton crepe [the former is being used for summer suits chez Cherult and the latter for summer frocks chez Chanel] and last, but most exciting of all, the combinations of utterly unexpected materials.

One of the smartest of these surprise textile mélanges is shown by Ardansé. She trims her linen suits and fabrics and frocks with hand knit or crocheted wool yokes, edges, and so on, worked right into the linen.

The Ardansé dress and jacket ensemble, sketched today, is of golden yellow linen. The sleeveless frock, shown on the small figure at the left, has a wool yoke, hand knit in an open checker design, exactly matching the frock in color. This yoke, incrusted in irregular star points in the linen bodice, turns into a softly draped scarf effect worn loosely knotted in front.

The wide tailored belt of the golden yellow linen is passed through linen tabs placed on the dress at the waistline front and back. A box pleat panel gives front fullness to the skirt; the back is plain.

The jacket is all knitted in the open checker design out of the golden yellow wool. It has a yellow linen band all round and linen band cuffs, and linen makes the belt buttoned on either side of the front with gold buttons. Gold buttons form a Tuxedo fastening, also.

Young Chap Wants to Settle Down, but Likes All the Girls

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"I am a young man of 23, and like most young men I am looking and longing for a sweet wife of my own. I feel I should be getting out now and making a start for myself, for which I need a good partner. I have had a good education, enjoy good health, and have a sufficient income. I prefer farm life to any thing else.

"I've been taking out girls for a few years now, but haven't been able to settle down to one yet. At present I have about six or seven girls that I date, on and off. What should be taken into consideration when choosing a life partner? If I court a certain girl is it wrong to have dates with other girls, once in a while?

"HURLEY."

There's nothing wrong, "Hurley," about having dates with other girls while you're "courting" one. I mean there needn't be any thing wrong with it. But it's not good courtship business, and indeed, may explain in your case your difficulty in getting the wife you want. You probably haven't heard the old bromide about there being safety in numbers. The girls, no doubt, have heard it. And they think you are a young man who is playing safe. Under which circumstances, it is quite difficult, you know, to sell yourself as a promising candidate for marital devotion.

One of the first rules in good personal salesmanship talk is to make the girl believe that she is the one and only, which you never can do while you still cling to the small notebook cluttered with other girls' telephone numbers. Concentrate, young man! Concentrate!

When choosing a life partner, take into consideration, first, your girl's taste for farm life. In your case, that will be the item of greatest importance. It's important that you two have congenial tastes. The girl's disposition is of paramount importance. If she's amiable, she can dispense with a lot of other talents, as, in a wife, there's no talent quite the equal of amiability. Good, of course, you'll want her—but not too good for human nature's daily food, as the poet says.

Food Talk.

Mrs. M. E. M. writes, "Will you please give me the recipe for salt rising bread made with cornmeal yeast?"

A request like this reminds me of childhood days. My maternal grandmother used to bake this kind of bread, and, as I remember, it had an unusual but delicious flavor and a rather firm texture. Genuine "salt rising" bread is not made with yeast of the home prepared or commercial variety. The cook depends upon some of the wild yeasts of the air. She prepares a warm, sweet mixture which is an ideal media for the growth and multiplication of the tiny yeast plants. As the yeast multiplies and grows it acts on the starch and sugar in the mixture, giving off a gas of unpleasant odor. This gas, however, completely disappears when the bread is baked.

Here is the way that the old time housewives made it a generation or so ago.

FOR TWO LOAVES OF BREAD.

1 cup water.
4 tablespoons white cornmeal.
2 teaspoons salt.
2 tablespoons sugar.
Flour.

Heat the milk and water to the scalding point in the top part of the double boiler. Cool until lukewarm, then add the meal, salt, and sugar. Pour this mixture into a fruit jar, a heavy crock or a pitcher and surround by water that is so hot that one can barely hold the hands in it with comfort. To be more exact, this temperature is about 120° F. The maintenance of this temperature of the water that surrounds the bread mixture is most important. Let the mixture stand in this hot water bath for six or seven hours, or until there is sign of fermentation. The hot water must be replenished from time to time because the temperature must be kept as constant as possible.

When fermentation has progressed sufficiently, the gas can be heard as it escapes from the mixture. Add two cups of flour [use bread flour] to the fermented liquid to make a soft sponge. Beat thoroughly, then put the sponge to rise, also at a temperature of 120° F., by surrounding it with hot water. Be sure not to provide a higher temperature which will kill the yeast.

When the sponge is quite light, add the flour gradually until the dough is stiff enough to knead, but do not add too much flour. Like all other yeast doughs, it is easy to use too much flour and obtain a dough that is too stiff. And the result is a heavy bread lacking in good flavor. The optimum amount of flour is just enough to keep the dough from sticking to the board and no more. The kneading should be done for 15 minutes at least, or until dough is as smooth as satin and is elastic and the surface has tiny bubbles of gas showing under the surface. Of course, these bubbles are not so large as they are in bread that is made from "tame" yeast. Shape dough into two loaves and place in greased pans. Put in a warm place to rise and keep covered so that the surface of the loaves does not become dry. Loaves and rolls should retain a moist surface until they are ready to be baked.

When the loaves have risen to about two and one-half times their original bulk they are ready for baking. Bake in a hot oven [450° F. for the first 15 minutes] until bread has risen as much as it will and starts to brown. Then reduce the heat to a medium oven [375° F.] to finish baking.

THE SIXTH JOURNEY

BY ALICE GRANT ROSMAN

SYNOPSIS.

John Falconer, a successful architect, returning home to England from Cape Town, meets Hilary Revel, author of travel books, on shipboard. During the journey how their acquaintance grows into a friendship neither wishes to end.

John tells Hilary of his daughter Judith, born of a café singer while he was a soldier in Africa. His wife, John says, had magnanimously adopted the child. Hilary suspects such magnanimity. John's sister Gertrude became Judith's legal guardian when his wife died.

Shortly after their return John and Hilary become engaged.

Judith leads a lonely life in her aunt's home. Her cousin Prue is her only friend. When Aunt Gertrude hears of her brother's engagement she sends Judith to a farm to stay with her former nurse, Tracy. John is uneasy about Judith not being in school. He thinks it unfair to drag Hilary continually into the question of the child and Hilary feels that he has had enough interference in caring for Judith. John writes Gertrude for the truth. His wrath explodes when she replies that she cannot, as a decent citizen, send a waif of dubious parentage among other children.

Judith is badly treated by Tracy. She makes friends with Clive Harpenden, to whose home she delivers cream for the old servant. Judy, having received no mail, writes secretly to Prue.

Prue meets Hilary for tea and tries to enlist her aid for Judith. Hilary's vow not to interfere makes her rebuff Prue. They run into Tim de Morreville, whom Hilary and John met on the boat home. Tim drives Prue home and makes an engagement to drive her next day to visit Judith. Prue sees and talks to Judy and is indignant at Tracy's treatment of the little girl.

Falconer leaves town on a business trip. Hilary, thinking over the problem of Judith, decides to write to John about her and her letter is a great relief to him.

Tracy becomes unbearably abusive to Judy, and Judy, crushed by the woman's cruel accusations, runs away to Prue. When John returns and hears of Judith's disappearance he rushes immediately to his sister's home. She tells him Tracy's address and he leaves at once for the farm. Tracy threatens to blackmail him.

INSTALLMENT XLIV.

SILENCING AN EVIL TONGUE.

Toward 10 o'clock Falconer was driving back to Haydon, but not this time to the farm. The inspector had given him information and a shred of comfort. The police had insisted upon seeing the child's room, in spite of Tracy's specious tale, had noted the broken lock, and found that Judith had escaped by the window in the night. The wood and all the country round had been combed by an army of police and voluntary searchers, and the blanket, neatly folded and hidden in the bracken, had come to light. The inspector thought the danger of foul play was small. The little girl had probably planned her expedition and found shelter at a distance. By the first train this morning police dogs were being sent down to pick up the scent.

Of Tracy he was distinctly doubtful. The farmer was a decent man, but the woman was known to have an evil temper and was unpopular in the village. Mr. Harpenden, the magistrate of the district, had put her through a pretty stiff cross-examination and was helping the police in every way. If Mr. Falconer would call at Haydon Manor, the inspector said, Mr. Harpenden would be able to tell him more than the chief constable himself.

Falconer, while the chauffeur had some breakfast, had put through a trunk call to Hilary and told her his scanty news, promising to ring her again at 2 o'clock or as near it as possible.

He drew up before the old gray house where for so many mornings Judy had delivered her cream, and sent in his card to the magistrate. Mrs. Harpenden came to him instead.

"I wanted to see Mr. Harpenden on urgent business . . . about a child who is missing," said Falconer.

"About little Judy? O, Mr. Falconer, is there any news?"

"I have been asking that question all night," Falconer said unsteadily. "She's . . . my daughter."

"But she did!" cried Clive excitedly. "She had a ten shilling note."

"Good heavens! You poor man. . . . There, do sit down and excuse me a moment."

Mrs. Harpenden hastened out of the room and returned with a stiff whisky and soda, which she pushed into his hands.

"My husband has gone over to the farm because he had word the police dogs had arrived," explained Mrs. Harpenden. "We are terribly distressed, for in a sense I feel I may have been responsible for precipitating the whole thing."

"I wish you would be good enough to tell me with absolute frankness all you know," said Falconer. "I came down from the north last night to hear that Judy was missing and have been driving about ever since half mad, as you may imagine. Until a month ago I was abroad, and the child has been in my sister's care since the death of my wife. The woman Tracy was Judy's old nurse, and my sister sent her to the farm for country air. I have had a business and a sick partner, and hadn't yet found time to run down and see her, for which I blame myself greatly, now it is too late."

"No, no, we'll find her, but O dear . . . this is dreadful! The poor darling was telling the truth then? I am not really surprised. Mr. Falconer, I'll try to make my story brief. Judy made friends with my boy. He's at home from school for a term and very bored, poor lad, with all the other young things away, and your little girl used to be sent over every morning with cream from the farm. From what Clive told me and my cook said . . . she's a shrewd woman . . . I suspected the Tracys were taking liberties with their guest, and in any case she must be having a dull time. I went over to see the little girl and was met with . . . Well, Mr. Falconer, the woman must be mad. She said Judy had never had a father, was a waif from the streets, and begged me to keep Clive away from her. . . . The poor little soul must have heard."

Falconer had started to his feet, then remembering Gertrude's version of the affair, he paused.

"You are not . . ." He hesitated. "Forgive me, you are not sparing me, by any chance? Or is it true that you complained to Tracy Judith was . . . well, preposterous as it sounds, Mrs. Harpenden, running after your boy is how my sister put it."

"What, a child of that age? Absurd! O, the woman's mad. There's not a doubt of it. The story is exactly as I have told you," she declared indignantly.

"Not mad, bad is the word you mean." He smiled faintly. "I should tell you there is a fragment of truth in all this. Judith's mother and I were not married, and my late wife seems to have confided in Tracy unwisely. But that she was a waif from the streets is a lie. Her mother was beyond reproach, except that I suppose a section of the world always considers this sort of thing a reproach against the woman concerned. As for Tracy, she has been trying to blackmail me this morning and I came here to ask Mr. Harpenden to return with me to the farm that she might repeat her threats before a magistrate. I'll punish her if it costs me every penny I possess."

Mrs. Harpenden pushed him gently back into his chair.

"Now you listen to me," she said. "We have to think of Judy. She must have had a severe shock and when she is found will need all the care you can give her. She is at a sensitive age, and if the position is as you say, it is no good for her sake to have the the whole world raking over matters that concern only you and her. You may leave Tracy in our hands. My husband is her brother's landlord and the magistrate of the district, and his lien to me are quite enough. We can silence that evil tongue and instill the fear of the Lord into her, believe me, quite as effectually and far more privately than you can do. . . . Good gracious . . . there's that boy of mine calling. Can there be any news?"

Mrs. Harpenden ran to the door and opened it to a shout of "Mother, quick, I say. . . . O, there you are. Look here, I've had an inspiration . . . what? . . . O, sorry."

The boy, his words tumbling over each other, paused as he caught sight of Falconer for the first time.

"This is my son. . . . Come and speak to Judy's father, Clive."

"O, are you? I am glad, but I wish we could find her, and I have got an inspiration this time, mother. The Flyer . . . you know, the early morning one. She might have gone by that to London."

"The bus from Bedford," explained Mrs. Harpenden to Falconer. "But surely the police would have inquired, old man."

"It's out of the question," said Falconer sadly. "She had no money."

"But she did," cried Clive excitedly. "She had a ten shilling note . . . a brand new one. She showed it to me herself that last morning . . . in the rain . . . tucked in her dress, it was. And, you see, jolly soon, about half past eleven, the morning flyer will be coming back and we could stop it and ask the driver. O, do let us, because he's sure to remember and there is a chance."

"It is certainly worth trying," said Mrs. Harpenden.

Lake Forest Renting Season Late This Year

BY THALIA ——.

FOR some reason or another, the renting season in Lake Forest is late. Usually at this time almost all of the places available for summer occupancy have been bespoken, but not so this year.

The Robert McCormick Adamses and Dr. and Mrs. James Herbert Mitchell have made arrangements to again move their families out to two of the faculty houses on the Lake Forest college campus for the summer months. The Russell Forgans have leased the Farley Hopkins' house in Deerpath avenue, but that's about all. There are others looking about, though, and so there will probably be as gay a summer colony as always. Sarah Wood and James Addington, who are to be married in June, are planning to have a Lake Forest place, but they haven't yet decided on a house.

The John V. Farwells are back from California and will move next month from their Lake Shore drive apartment to Ardleigh, their Lake Forest place. Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Robinson, who have been in Florida since February, will return to Chicago next Friday. They will spend a fortnight or so in their new town apartment at 1500 Lake Shore drive before going out to their Lake Forest residence for the summer.

The Crown Prince of Italy Attends Wedding of a Visconti.

Count Ruggero Visconti di Modrone, who went back to Italy several weeks ago after a year's stay in Chicago, was one of the ushers for the marriage of his sister, Countess Ida Visconti to Count Cavallo of Milan, which took place at the Visconti palace in Milan on Saturday. Count Cavallo is on the staff of the Crown Prince Umberto, and the latter served as his best man.

Count Visconti, who came to Chicago to study American banking methods with an idea to seeing how they might be applied in Italy, is a direct descendant of the Visconti who ruled Lombardy from the early 13th to the 15th century, and the Visconti family is to Milan what the Medicis were to Florence. The Medicis virtually invented international banking. The Visconti began the famous Milan cathedral, and were important patrons of Milanese art. Count Visconti's father, Count Giovanni, who visited here early in the winter, is gentleman in waiting to the queen of Italy. The young nobleman, who is a skilled fencer and horseman, is considered a "good egg" by the numerous friends he made in the younger set here during his Chicago stay.

Bertrand Ambergs' Daughter, Born March 30, Called Barbara.

Warfield of 4831 Kenwood avenue are to sail on Saturday from New Orleans for South America, to be gone about two months . . . that Charles Sanford Jr. of Syracuse, who was an usher at the Logan-Terbell wedding on Saturday had been married a few days before to Miss Jane Cook, and that he brought his bride along to Chicago with him . . . that the Robert A. Gardners of Lake Forest are in Santa Barbara?

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Monroe will depart this week-end to open their summer residence, White Gates farm, at Wayne, Ill. Mr. Monroe's sister, Mrs. William J. Calhoun, is postponing her return from the east, where she has been making a round of visits, until early May. She will be with the Monroes until her departure in August for her residence in Peiping, China.

The Chicago Goucher College club has issued invitations for a tea for President and Mrs. David Allan Robertson, to take place at the Hubbard Woods residence of Mrs. Robert S. Antoinette Names Four Essential Facial Creams

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

A query comes from a confused correspondent which suggests that there must be just countless other women in a similar boat, confusion-ally speaking.

"What on earth is a woman in her thirties, of average good complexion supposed to use on her face to see her into a nice old age?" she writes. "I mean, what does she have to use? Or, to make myself more clear, what, of the rows and rows of things confronting her at a cosmetic counter, does she need if she is anxious to do right by her face, but can't afford everything?"

I'm glad the question was asked, because it's been on my mind to discuss, but I have just neglected doing so. Now, an average skin is one neither oily nor dry, without facial blemish, and one nurtured on a good blood supply. For such I would enumerate these as essentials: "A cleansing cream; a skin food, a tonic and astringent lotion—and for purely makeup use, a foundation cream."

With these items used consistently every day, understand, and supported with cold water applications following the daily soap and water treatment, you can pretty nearly guarantee a young complexion into late life.

The many, many bottles that confuse at a cosmetic counter may, every one of them, have a purpose, for skins have this and that wrong with them. They may need an individualized "extra" remedy or beauty aid, such as a wrinkle cream, let's say, or an especially strong lotion for sagging skin on face and throat.

But I'm thinking about an average woman in her thirties whose complexion needs are just over the borderline of youth's. Astringents, for instance, are not advocated for use by young girls. Neither would they need tissue creams nor sharp tonics. But the use of an astringent preparation is advised about the time the average skin begins to slack a bit for no other reason than that of accumulating birthdays.

Bright Sayings of the Children

Little Libbie, 7 years old, came home from school one day and said: "Mama, teacher wants me to let her know where we were all born."

I said, "That's very easy, Libbie. Daddy was born in Europe, I was born in Milwaukee, Gladys and Edna were born in Chicago, and you were born in Michigan."

A little frightened, she asked, "Well, how did we meet." A. L.

Jean, aged 3, had learned the expression H2O from her brother. When she was visiting her aunt at Niagara Falls she piped up with, "O, auntie, look at the H2O!" R. N.

Apollo Club to Disband for Lack of Funds

BY EDWARD MOORE.

LAST night's performance of Georg Schumann's "Ruth" at Orchestra hall may have been the last appearance of the Apollo Musical club. During the intermission W. F. McClure announced from the stage that after fifty-nine years of existence the organization was no longer able to finance further operations, and that unless a sum of money could be raised it would be obliged to discontinue.

Pledge cards of $10 each, payable Oct. 1, and entitling the signers to a pair of tickets for each of three concerts, were passed around the audience, but the amount realized was not made public. In addition a committee headed by Frank J. Loesch will begin an immediate drive for associate memberships in the club.

Another mischance threatened the evening, but passed over. After a delay of fifteen minutes in starting, Conductor Edgar Nelson announced that Dorothy Bowen, engaged for the part of Ruth, had not arrived, but that Olive June Lacey had agreed to come out of the audience and take the part. However, Miss Bowen arrived before the end of the orchestral prelude, and Miss Lacey once again took her original seat.

Once under way, the performance was a success. The melodious work with its markedly Wagnerian tinge lends itself well to voices, and the chorus sang as I have not heard them sing in a number of years. The solo parts are important, and they were excellently sung by Miss Bowen, soprano, Lilian Knowles, contralto, as Naomi, Herbert Gould, bass, as Boaz, and Leslie Arnold in the lesser part of the priest.

Bertha Ochsner gave her dance concert at the Goodman theater last night with a program suggesting that she has examined many styles of the art of dancing and has absorbed important elements from all of them. There was a renaissance suite by Corelli and Rameau, a Contra Tanz by Beethoven, Debussy's "Sunken Cathedral," where her costumes and posing suggested the medieval. Also there was a number, "Delirium," without music, preluded and ended by an assistant group in white masks, Miss Ochsner acting the matter of the title while from without came groans, shouts, muttering, grunts, and the thump of percussion instruments, a sort of "Emperor Jones" in terms of the dance.

This was only part of the program. The rest covered as wide, but different ground. Miss Ochsner has great respect for the notes and tempi of music, in which she differs from many other dancers: what she creates to music does not distort the music. She is effective, agile, graceful in bodily expression, doing considerable with the art of pantomime in combination with the dance. She was assisted by Emily Bottcher, an excellent pianist.

Primate of Britain to Visit Jerusalem with J. P. Morgan

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

JERUSALEM, April 13.—Considerable interest was aroused in all Christian communities here today by the announcement that the archbishop of Canterbury will visit Jerusalem on Wednesday, coming by way of Syria, accompanied by J. P. Morgan.

The Palestine government has dispatched eight automobiles containing troops and high government officials from Jerusalem to meet the Anglican bishop and his party at the border.

The archbishop will informally visit the Church of the Holy Sepulchre and other holy places, accompanied by high officials, police and the high commissioner's personal staff. It is being emphasized to the sects having interests in the holy places to be visited that the archbishop of Canterbury's visit is entirely informal.

CAPT. BERNHARDT, OF 2 NATIONS, TELLS OF HIS 100 YEARS

BY KATHERINE KELLEY.

The first moment you lay eyes on him he will remind you of the ageless George Bernard Shaw—the little man with snowy beard and hair, and smooth cheek and gentle, twinkling eye.

As Capt. Maurice Bernhardt, cousin of the immortal actress, Sarah Bernhardt, sits in the tiny reception room of the Home for the Aged of the Little Sisters of the Poor, he appears eternally young, though tomorrow the calendar will declare him a century old.

In the next room a tailor waits to measure Capt. Bernhardt for a new dark suit to wear on the occasion of his 100th birthday. Tomorrow dignitaries of the Catholic church will come to the jubilee that the Sisters have planned for him. Auxiliary Bishop Bernard J. Shiel will give his benediction, and masses will be sung in the morning by the priests, and there will be a reception.

The hundred years that have lain so lightly upon this French officer's shoulders have brought him much to dream about, and he finds pleasure in recounting to his comrades and the Sisters who attend him the glories that were his in serving two nations. As the tailor waits, Capt. Bernhardt finishes his story of how he shared imprisonment in Germany with Napoleon III. after the collapse of the empire at Sedan in the Franco-Prussian war. How as an American officer on the Kearsarge he previously had helped sink the confederate British built raider Alabama, off Cherbourg.

The captain goes back to the '50s, when he came to America as a courier of the French ambassador. Lascases; how he became a friend of Abraham Lincoln.

"I would have gone to France again with America in the last war if they would have taken me," the captain said. "But I had to be content staying home selling Liberty bonds and making speeches to anarchists. Once in a speech I told them I only had one pair of socks, but I never got cold feet. They got the point to that."

"Yes, I knew my cousin, Sarah. When she was playing here in the theaters last she came to me and said: 'See here, you've got to come along with me.' And I did. I played with her, too, as a French soldier in 'La Cathedral' and in 'Camille.'

"How does it happen I live to be a hundred? I can't say as to that. My grandfather on my father's side lived to be 114.

"I used to model. Yes, I did. In the Chicago Art institute. You'll see my portrait hanging there somewhere. I wore my red and blue French uniform of 1870 and posed for the young artists."

Mother Benedict enters the reception room to remind Capt. Bernhardt that the tailor is waiting. The captain rises with the aid of his cane.

"Do you want a lift, sir?" the interviewer asks.

"No, I can make it fine," he said.

Orient's Lure Flashes from These Paintings

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

Byron B. Boyd is back in town from a wander year in distant oriental strongholds of romance with an exhibit of paintings in the O'Brien gallery. They literally sparkle. They dazzle you with their vivid colorings, the blue of the sea, a dancing freckle of diamond glimmer, and the hot red in roofs and sails. They bewitch you.

It is difficult to come down to specific instances when the whole galaxy of paintings reacts as one. Still, perhaps if one chooses this or that and names it, it may make the exhibition a little less strange. For instance, consider the dancing green lights in "Adriatic Emeralds" and feast your eyes on the reds in the sails and the movement on the docks in "Merchants of Color." There is more red, vivid and warm, in "Red Roofs of Ragusa." There is a moment of intense loveliness in "Down to the Sea."

Not all of these paintings, however, sparkle and dance, in some of them beauty and light is veiled although the witchery and values are still there. Look at the palms and the soft haze in "Beyond Lies Albania"; look at the romantic stage setting, "Ulyssus Lan"; look at the moonlight hush, feel its pensive melancholy, in "Oriental Nocturne"; and then, swiftly catching step with our first emotion, seize the vibrant thrill that quivers in the tiny gem, "Cove of the Legend," pure cream and blue tied with magic.

Mr. Boyd puts a few character paintings before us to prove that this land of his is indeed mortal. "In a Balkan Market" shows three soft eyed shoppers, and a peasant woman, clean cut, beautiful, looks at you from the canvas labeled, "Woman of Bosnia."

RUSSIA TEACHES 3 R'S; SCHOOLS OPEN 16 HRS. DAY

Pupils Attend in Shifts Day and Night.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MOSCOW, March 15.—[By mail.]—"If we had some ham we'd have some ham and eggs if we had some eggs." That's the condition of Russia today, starting from scratch with nothing in the world but kilometers and background.

Take the soviet government's drive for education, and the efforts to stamp out illiteracy. The Reds had to start at the bottom and begin by developing school teachers. No need to rush work on the log school houses until men and women could be trained to instruct the classes that might eventually be held there.

Then put up the buildings, school house and school master's home, with installation of desks, benches and blackboards. Then get text books printed and slates made and pencils manufactured. After that a campaign to induce peasants to send their kids to school instead of taking them out in the fields to help with the crops.

Number of Pupils Grows.

In 1914, when Russia's population was 130 millions, the czar's elementary schools had only 7,250,000 children enrolled. By 1921 the number was increased to 9,200,000, despite the loss of territory embraced by Poland, Finland, Latvia, Lithuania, and Estonia, all generously carved by the treaty of Versailles from the former Muscovite empire of the Romanoffs.

By 1926 the figure had risen only to 9,500,000, chiefly because of civil war, the famine, and general disorganization of the country. In 1928 the number enrolled was 14 millions, and it is expected to exceed 16 million this year.

Theoretically, compulsory education exists throughout the soviet union. It was voted as law a decade ago. But the central government is not attempting to enforce it everywhere until it is materially possible to do so through trained personnel and physical preparedness.

Teach in Many Languages.

Instruction is given in the language which predominates in the region where the school is located, and more than seventy different tongues are in use throughout the country. The number of dialects employed is increasing continually as new outlying regions in the south, east, and north are gradually being equipped with school ma'ams and school houses.

Despite lack of facilities, the government is making efforts to utilize such material means as exist and in certain districts of Siberia, in the newly developed Kuznetsk mining region for instance, the school operates on a three shift per day basis. One school built to accommodate 800 students handles 4,000 per day in different shifts.

Children living in the immediate vicinity must attend the early shift, starting at 6 o'clock in the morning. The country boys and girls are enrolled in the next seance, between noon and 5 p. m., and the final term, from 5 to 10:30 at night, is attended by children living in the community.

Operate on 5 Day Week.

Two shifts of teachers manage to handle the job, overlapping on their shifts to take care of the three sections. Schools are operated on the five day week, the same as industry, so that after every four days it's Saturday again and no school. This has practically ruined the ancient art of playing hookey.

More than 30,000 new teachers have been graduated in normal schools in the federated provinces of the union this winter to take up teaching, and 20,000 more are required for the rest of the country, according to 1931 estimates.

A large majority of the schools are of the one room, one teacher type, with instruction in reading, writing, and arithmetic, a little geography and some history, chiefly concerning the overthrow of the czar, the revolution, foreign intervention, and the new proletarian state.

Religious difficulties have been encountered in many regions, especially in the Caucasus, where it had been considered for centuries that the only book learning necessary could be obtained by systematic reading of the Koran. Children were taught great gobs of the text of this revered work, without understanding a single word of it, and then turned out as educated scholars.

Now the authorities split 50-50 with the Koran fervents by having general school work during the regular class periods and then letting the pious parents use the schoolroom to have their offspring taught the Koran by one of the priests in overtime.

The bolshevik government reminds critics of the czar's official edict in 1896 that "attendance of primary school is not compulsory except in the Baltic provinces, which is clearly intelligible. Considering the great distances and lack of schools compulsory education would be an intolerable burden alike for children and parents and even for the government, which would be compelled inevitably to have everywhere boarding houses attached to the schools."

LES CANADIENS, HAWKS PLAY FOR WORLD ICE TITLE

Battle on Montreal Rink Tonight.

Tulsa Bid Refused

OTTAWA, Ont., April 13.—(AP)—Arrangements for a play-off series between Tulsa, champions of the American league, and the 1931 National league holders of the Stanley cup, emblematic of the world's professional hockey championship, cannot be made this year, custodians of the Stanley cup announced here tonight. Tulsa's challenge had been filed formally today.

William Foran, joint custodian of the Stanley cup with P. D. Ross, also of Ottawa, declared tonight that "owing to the lateness of the season we are unable to accept the Tulsa challenge."

Montreal, Que., April 13.—[Special.]—Les Canadiens of Montreal, defending world's hockey champions, and the Chicago Blackhawks meet here tomorrow night in the fifth and final game of the Stanley cup series.

DICK IRVIN.

Tomorrow night's game will mark the end of the longest hockey season in history, as well as the conclusion of the most bitterly fought Stanley cup series.

Both teams, although pretty tired of hockey, are in good shape for the final game. Howie Morenz, star of the Flying Frenchmen, has a bruised shoulder, which, however, hasn't handicapped him to any noticeable extent in the games to date. Outside of that the champions are in the best condition they have boasted since the playoffs started against Boston three weeks ago.

Hawks in Good Shape.

The Hawks, too, are in fine fettle. They are determined to come back to capture the title tomorrow night, despite their discouraging setback of Saturday night, when they saw a two goal lead vanish into defeat under the inspired attack of the Frenchmen.

Coach Dick Irvin plans to start his lightweight forwards, Tommy Cook, Stewart Adams, and Harold March, with Cyclone Wentworth and Taffy Abel at defense.

Against this lineup, Manager Cecil Hart of Les Canadiens plans to start Pete Lepine at center, Johnny Gagnon and Aurel Joliat, with Marty Burke and Sylvio Mantha on defense.

Both clubs are expected to play cautious hockey tomorrow, though it has been cautious hockey that has cost the last two games, one for Montreal and one for Chicago. Last Thursday night, when Les Canadiens deserted from their flashing attack to protect a two goal lead, the Hawks tied the game up in the last three minutes of play and then went on to win in overtime. Saturday night the situation was reversed, with the Hawks striving to protect a two goal lead, only to see it vanish.

Hawks Protest Romerill.

No decision has been made by President Frank Calder of the National league regarding Chicago's protest against Alex Romerill as referee because of alleged favoritism. Even the Montreal newspapers today commented on his poor work in Saturday night's game, when the Hawks were compelled to play fourteen minutes of the second period short handed because of various penalties, some of them of a trivial nature.

CALMES POUNDS DORAN TO TEN ROUND DEFEAT

BERLENBACH, IN COMEBACK BOUT, WINS QUICKLY

Fight Decisions

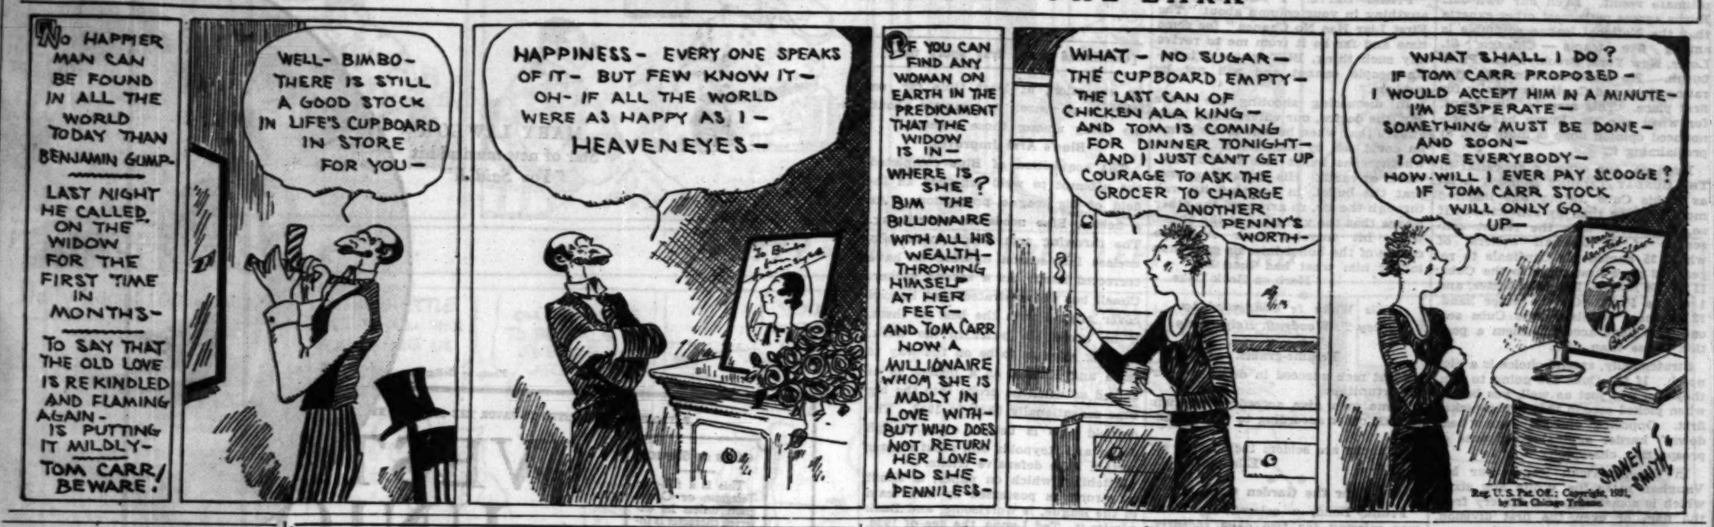
At New York—Norman Heller knocked out Joe Sherman [11]; Paul Berlenbach stopped Billy Shade [1].

At Philadelphia—Jimmy Slim beat Young Ryan [10].

At Chicago—Freddie Miller beat Tommy Kluth [10].

At Pittsburgh—Midget Wolgast beat Archie Bell [10].

THE GUMPS—THE SONG OF THE LARK



No happier man can be found in all the world today than Benjamin Gump—
Last night he called on the widow for the first time in months—
To say that the old love is rekindled and flaming again—
Is putting it mildly—
Tom Carr, beware!
Well—Bimbo—there is still a good stock in life's cupboard in store for you—
Happiness—every one speaks of it—but few know it—oh—if all the world were as happy as I—
Heaveneyes—
If you can find any woman on earth in the predicament that the widow is in—
Where is she? Bim the billionaire with all his wealth—throwing himself at her feet—and Tom Carr now a millionaire whom she is madly in love with—but who does not return her love—and she penniless—
What—no sugar—the cupboard empty—the last can of chicken ala king—and Tom is coming for dinner tonight—and I just can't get up courage to ask the grocer to charge another penny's worth—
What shall I do? If Tom Carr proposed—I would accept him in a minute—I'm desperate—something must be done—and soon—I owe everybody—how will I ever pay Scooge? If Tom Carr stock will only go up—

ESTELLE PLANS TO FIGHT JACK'S DIVORCE PLANS

Says He'll Have to Battle to Win Decree.

BY ROSALIND SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., April 13.—If Jack Dempsey, after retiring as a fighter of the ring, wants to stage his next battle in divorce courts, he can have all the battle he wants. That, in short, is Estelle Taylor Dempsey's reception of an interview given by Dempsey in Reno, Nev., today, in which the ex-champion announced an intention to sue for a decree on grounds of incompatibility.

Mrs. Dempsey disappeared from her home today. Her maid announced she was out of town, but this evidently was a ruse to keep Estelle from too many inquiries, because she appeared later in the downtown office of Joseph Scott, Los Angeles attorney, where a legal conference was held to prepare for her fight against Jack's reported divorce intentions.

Says Hollywood's Place.

"Right here, where we both live, is the place for a divorce action to be heard," Mrs. Dempsey sent word, "and right here is where it will be heard. I sent Jack Dempsey no messages directing him to secure a divorce. In that portion of his reported statement in Reno, I am sure there was a mistake.

"But if a divorce is to be gotten," she emphasized, as if to call attention to the fact that she is still without exact information about a divorce action, "it will be obtained by Mrs. Dempsey."

The actress asserted that remarks attributed to Jack in which he charged extravagance and criticized her in Reno "because of our disappointment at not having children must have been erroneous, for they are not true."

"Our Hollywood house was built on Jack's orders and we are living on the exact scale that he installed and demanded," she said. "The overhead expenses of such a pretentious place are high—far too high, I have often thought and said. But Jack Dempsey is the master of the house and I deferred to him, as I did, in leaving my screen work, in order to make frequent trips across the continent with him, and to see him. Sometimes I was only able to be with my husband for snatches of a few hours or a few days, but I loved Jack Dempsey."

Jack Calls Brother Joe.

"The biggest item of extravagance I can think of," she said, "is my gift of a paid up automobile to Jack for a birthday present. I paid for it out of my own earnings as an actress."

The Dempseys were married in San Diego, Cal., Feb 7, 1925.

Joe Dempsey was summoned hastily from Los Angeles by his brother Jack to visit the ex-champion in Reno last Saturday and Sunday. Joe returned yesterday. He telephoned Mrs. Dempsey that he was acting as intermediary for his brother and asked for a conference with his sister-in-law this morning.

Mrs. Dempsey sent word to Joe to visit Attorney Scott.

"One thing that makes me indignant," said Mrs. Dempsey, "is the report that my husband had made me a property settlement. That is flatly a misstatement."

Emerging from her attorney's offices, Mrs. Dempsey said: "I still love Jack. The separation is not of my seeking. I shall make no move toward a divorce until he takes first action."

TO WED INTO SOCIETY?

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Reno, Nev., April 13.—Jack Dempsey may follow the example of his successor, Gene Tunney, and graduate from the sporting world via a society marriage with the attractive Mrs. Elizabeth Church of New York.

Dempsey, who has been escorting Mrs. Church, just granted her decree here, about Reno, today admitted that he plans to divorce Estelle Taylor Dempsey.

"I have not heard from Estelle since I left Los Angeles," the ex-champion said. "I took my personal belongings and said farewell at her request. It was she who said 'We're through.'"

Mrs. Church, who won her liberty from Reginald R. Church, son of Samuel Harden Church, railroad man and educator, on the grounds of extreme cruelty, was called society's "luckiest bride" at the time of her marriage to Church.

Seeking a Decision

Jack Dempsey and his wife, Estelle Taylor, movie actress. The ex-champion said in Reno, Nev., yesterday that he has made plans for a divorce. His wife stated that she would fight such an action.

Thompson Goes After Freeman's Crown Tonight

Cleveland, O., April 13.—(AP)—Tommy Freeman, world's welterweight champion, will engage in the first defense of his title tomorrow night by meeting Young Jack Thompson of Oakland, Cal., from whom he won the crown here six months ago.

TOMMY FREEMAN.

They will meet in a 15 round battle to a decision at the welterweight limit of 147 pounds. Because of an unpopular decision resulting from their first championship engagement, a new policy in rendering decisions will be introduced tomorrow night. Two judges, to be named by the Cleveland boxing commission at the ringside, will cast their votes at the end of the contest, and unless they disagree the referee will have no voting power. In the event of a disagreement the third man in the ring will render a decision. Heretofore it has been the practice to use only a referee.

Indications were tonight that a crowd of 10,000 would witness the battle, with a possibility that the gate receipts at prices of $2 to $10 might reach $55,000 or $60,000. Freeman will receive 50 per cent of the receipts with 10 per cent going to Thompson.

Freeman ruled a slight favorite to retain his title, although Thompson is firm in his conviction that he will regain the championship by a knockout within five rounds. Whether Freeman can duplicate his victory over the Negro depends upon his physical condition. Freeman appears to be just as strong as ever and plans to center his attack upon the body in the hope of wearing down Thompson and stealing his speed.

France Picks Team to Meet Chicago Boys

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 13.—Eight amateur boxers tonight fought their way to places on the team which will represent France in the international Golden Gloves bouts to be held in Chicago May 12.

These young men emerged at the top of the heap after a campaign which carried them through weeks of training and many nights of fighting in sectional elimination tournaments conducted in all corners of the country.

These contests aroused the fistic ambitions of boys throughout the nation and the meet drew a particularly large number of entrants from the army. Nearly every barracks and training camp sent a team to its local tournament.

Laudrin, of Paris, who won the heavyweight title tonight, drew the greatest applause from the crowd, while the most clever exhibition of boxing skill was given by the featherweight champion, Lecat of Elbeuf.

Other winners were: Flyweight, Perrier of Limoges; bantamweight, Bruyere of Sochaux; lightweight, Mayor of Toulouse; welterweight, Paninieras of Limoges; middleweight, Rigau of Sochaux; light heavyweight, Meriot of Paris.

Umpires for National League Openers Named

New York, April 13.—(AP)—President John A. Heydler of the National league today announced the assignment of umpires for tomorrow's opening games. They follow:

At Boston: Klem, Stark and Jorda.

At Philadelphia: Rigler, Pfirman and Clarke.

At Cincinnati: Moran, Magerkurth and McGrew.

At Chicago: Quigley, Reardon and Scott.

Tilden Scores 3 Set Victory Over Kozelah

Lincoln, Neb., April 13.—(AP)—William Tilden defeated Karel Kozelah, European professional, in straight sets in their exhibition tennis match here tonight. The sets went 6-4, 6-2, 6-3.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cleveland, O., April 13.—The White Sox and Indians are not giving off any pennant aroma but they'll at least draw more than their share of attention tomorrow when they play the parts assigned to them in the kicking open of the American league campaign.

They'll get the attention from America's fandom because two of the best right handers in the business are going to clash. In the home corner there is Wes Ferrell, last season triumphant in 25 games and hopeful of bettering the mark in the impending campaign. In the visitors' corner is Tommy Thomas, than whom there are few better when he is the real Thomas. If he's right tomorrow the Indians will know they've seen something and Manager Bush will know he has a pitcher instead of a cripple at his disposal for the budding season. As for Ferrell, the Sox are not taking him lightly. Nobody ever does.

New Lineup to Be Tested.

After getting here this evening from Toledo, where a small parcel of his men engaged in a final exhibition rehearsal, Bush declared he would push open the season with a lineup entirely different from anything attempted before this afternoon at Toledo. Some of the alterations are temporary. They were made necessary because of the absence of Smead Jolley, the clean up hitter. That Jolley should not be available in Cleveland is doubly unfortunate. It is the park in which he does his best hitting. He has a marked fondness for bouncing drives off the high but not distant right field wall.

The most important shift made by Bush was the moving of Lu Blue, first sacker recently purchased from the Browns, to the leadoff rôle. That's where he wants to be and that's where he'll stay, barring unforseen difficulties. Simons, another with the capabilities of a batter for the No. 1 berth, will bat below Blue.

The fleet footed, flashy Reynolds will operate as per custom in the third notch and in the clean up spot, you'll find Lucius Appling, the rising 22 year old shortstop, who got himself some recognition by hammering the Giant pitchers all the way from Texas to New York.

Cissell Comes Next.

For a spell, at least, Cissell is going to follow Appling. Then will come Johnny Watwood who, after holding first base until relief came in the shape of Blue, is back in the outfield. He's filling in for the boil laden Jolley. Having had practically no work as a fly chaser this spring, Watwood naturally is not at his best. He showed that in the Sunday game at New York. Eichrodt would be far better defensively, but Bush believes that Watwood, a left handed hitter, can do better with the bat. He might pull a few against that right field wall. The revived Kamm will be next to Watwood. Then the batterymen.

That Bush has constructed an act that is vastly improved over 1930 has been mentioned before. It bears repeating because on each day of their labors this spring the Sox showed just a bit better than the day before.

In the past, attempts were made to cover up weaknesses by employing lads from obscure minors. There are none of those this year. Bush ran them out. Every post is covered by experienced men. The one exception is at short, but Appling himself is

230,000 See Major League Games Today

GABBY HARTNETT. [Catcher.]

New York, April 13.—(AP)—It's fair and warmer along the baseball fronts for the opening of the major league season tomorrow.

Far from feeling any pinch of the times, the sixteen American and National league clubs have marshaled reinforcements, increased the wages of many of their star performers, and otherwise set the stage for a gala getaway as well as a brisk campaign and big business all summer long.

Approximately 230,000 are expected to turn out for the eight opening games, prepared to give the great American sport an appropriate sendoff and attack fresh supplies of peanuts, popcorn, and soda pop with patriotic enthusiasm.

Hoover to See First Game.

President Hoover leads the list of notables who will figure in the opening ceremonies, featured, according to time honored custom, by formal parades, floral tokens, and the hoisting of flags.

The President, who saw the Philadelphia Athletics clinch the world series in the final game last October, will be on hand to watch Connie Mack's champions start the defense of their title against the Washington Senators, generally regarded as the Athletics' outstanding rivals for American league honors this year.

There will be no special attraction in New York except for the annual début of the one and only Babe Ruth, but the Yankees and Boston Red Sox expect to draw an opening day crowd of 50,000 to the Yankee stadium. This was the top figure in advance estimates for all the openers.

Heydler Watches Giants.

John Heydler, president of the National league, planned to see the New York Giants open the season at Philadelphia, while the Brooklyn Robins journeyed to Boston to trade wallops with the Braves.

The Detroit Tigers will play the Browns at St. Louis, featuring a southpaw duel between Earl Whitehill and Walter Stewart.

Nearly a score of newcomers will be closely watched as they trot out on the field tomorrow to hold down regular jobs. With the exception of the Athletics and Washington in the American league, and the Cardinals and Cubs in the National league, every club has rearranged its lineup for the 1931 campaign.

Hafey Remains Holdout.

While standing pat on their regular lineups, the Cardinals and Athletics, favorites to repeat their 1930 pennant victories, have strengthened their pitching prospects by acquiring sensational youngsters. The Cards, however, came up to the barrier temporarily without the services of their slugging outfielder, Chick Hafey, the last of the holdouts.

CHARLEY GRIMM. [First base.]

LESTER BELL. [Third base.]

Opening Day

Teams—Chicago Cubs vs. Pittsburgh Pirates.

Place—Wrigley field, Clark and Addison streets.

Time—3 p. m.

Probable attendance—43,000.

How to get in—If you haven't a reserved seat, don't try to buy one now. Twenty thousand general admission tickets will be placed on sale at 11 a. m.

The weather—Mostly fair and cooler, with some cloudiness.

How they finished in National league in 1930—Cubs, second place, won 90, lost 64; Pirates, fifth place, won 80, lost 74; against each other, eleven victories each.

Umpires—Quigley, Reardon and Scott.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The Chicago Cubs and the Pittsburgh Pirates, ever bitter enemies in National league competition, open the season at Wrigley field at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The issue finds Manager Rogers Hornsby and his protégés unafraid and ready to do their stuff with maximum eagerness.

For a month all those baseball bugs who last fall were going to show Mr. Hornsby a thing or two by staying away from the north side ball acreage this season have been struggling for choice locations for this afternoon. Yesterday the plans to snub Hornsby with icy indifference became so severe that President William Veeck broke down and cried. Then he called one of the groundkeepers and asked whatell was the delay in getting that sold out sign hung up.

Until Opening Day.

All the choice boxes had been taken several days ago. Yesterday morning the last of the grandstand reserved sections were snapped up within an hour. So, you see, when a baseball fan says in the winter that he's off a ball club he certainly means what he says—up till the opening day sale goes on.

Now about these Cubs—here we are a confessed baseball expert who has been watching these fellows daily since Feb. 17. And derned if we can tell you right now what to expect from them.

Of one thing we are certain, though. You can scratch all that stuff you've been hearing about Hornsby and Wilson kicking each other's shins in the clubhouse. Also, please do not be silly enough to believe anything you've heard about Kiki Cuyler being all burned up because Rog made him the leadoff man. Or that Charley Root has been belligerent because of the passing of his pal, Joe McCarthy, etc., etc.

'Twas Just Plain Laziness.

We're not forgetting those sharp, shooting pains that we suffered watching the nine take 14 lickings from minor league ball clubs. But if you'll come over so we can whisper in your ear we'll tell you our idea of the reason for all that flopping about. Plain old-fashioned laziness, friends, if you ask us, and nothing else but.

Take Pat Malone, for instance, a fellow who wins his 20 or 22 games each year in the National league whether any other pitcher in the league does or not. Pat hasn't earned his victuals this spring. One day it would be a misery in his shoulder, the next day Pat would be incapacitated with symptoms of ingrowing toenails and the following day he would be all broken up with the fear that he was about to be taken down with hives.

Hack Wilson. Hack was all upset for three weeks about the new seams on the baseball, and when he discovered the new baseball wrinkle was just a hoax, and was about to resume his spins, he went to San Francisco and became hysterical about those crazy architects who planned that right field fence so far from the home plate that everybody said Hack couldn't shoot a baseball over the thing with a Big Bertha cannon.

And so on, half way down the line. But, beginning today, things should be different. Everything that happens today and tomorrow and next day—on for 154 games in 1931—will go in the record books. Contracts in 1932 will be based largely on these records which hatch tomorrow. If that doesn't mean something in contrast with the sloppy behavior of the Cubs these last six weeks then the Cubs are hopeless.

It matters little how much Mr. Hornsby is liked or disliked personally by some of his boys. The fact remains that by bearing down on his task as a baseball player Hornsby has been able to give some of his greatest stars lessons in the art of hitting baseballs. And hitting baseballs is the main inspiration of the Cubs. If Hornsby had failed in his effort to set an example for his underlings he might have found himself in a tough "has been" spot. But if he continues his slugging as per indications based on spring performances he'll be sitting in the golden chair when it comes to inspirational hints to his hired hands.

See Changes in Lineup.

There will be changes in the Cub battlefront before the season is old. But the personnel phases that seem to have upset the customers most probably never will manifest themselves. Hornsby promises to be in there hitting like he's rarely hit before, and, if we know our Wilsons and our Cuylers and our Hartnetts and our Grimms, they'll be laboring every day to demonstrate to their boss that there are some other sweet hitters on the ball club. Which will be just what Mr. Hornsby will like and the fellows needn't come over to the house for supper unless they want to.

In lots of ways it will be just the same old Cub team out there this afternoon, strengthened a great deal in the pitching department by the addition of Bob Smith, the renewed zeal and confidence of Fred Blake, the physical reclamation of Charley Root, and the lurking in the offing of Newcomers May, Sweetland, Baecht, and Warneke.

But the big improvement, insofar as the offense is concerned, is contained in the promise that Hornsby and Hartnett will be playing their first full season together. Neither has let down a second in preparation for the experience. Each hit one or more homers in every park visited by the Cubs this spring, a record which involved some astounding smacking.

Cubs Hold Edge.

But narrowing this piece down to the current series with the Pirates. On the coast this spring the Cubs met and defeated the Pirates five straight, the first four of which were beautifully played games. Then the Pirates won two and the Cubs looked none too good, for in each they blew four run leads.

Manager Ens originally had planned to use either Brame or Kremer in the opener, but both were running high fevers last night and there was some question about either being able to work in the series. French, the Bucs' leading left hander, thereupon got the assignment.

Paul Waner was a little limpy at the time of the Cub-Pirate exhibition games, but now is said to be in good shape and eager to be just as unpleasant as usual.

The batting order:

BASEBALL OPENING.

CHICAGO'S Cubs and White Sox will open their pennant marathons this afternoon with Pittsburgh at Wrigley field and the south siders parading their revised wares at Cleveland. So from now until Sept. 27 the genus fan, rooter, or what have you, has come into his own.

We note that baseball experts who accompanied the various teams to spring training camps are more chary than usual in picking positively the ultimate result. Even our own Mr. Burns agrees with most other experts that the National league scramble is among five teams — Chicago, St. Louis, New York, Brooklyn, and Pittsburgh. He contents himself with rating Cubs and Cardinals equally for first place. This may be significant, for when our Mr. Burns has a pronounced opinion none is more bold in proclaiming it.

Even so, our expert's appraisal in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE sounded a bit as if his Cubs' rating was inspired more by hope than by conviction. If so, it accords with the recent consensus of 66 baseball writers, of whom 35 named the Cardinals to repeat, 13 gave first place to the Cubs, 12 to the Robins, 1 to the Pirates, and 1 to the Phils. On the other hand, 22 of those 66 placed the Cubs second, and none accorded them a position worse than fifth.

Strategically, second choice is a nice notch. If the Cubs are going to win, they can win just as well, yes better, when picked second than when picked first. Opposing clubs always "bear down" harder against champions or prospective champions.

In the American league our Mr. Vaughan rates the White Sox sixth, which is something of a far cry from the flag, or even the first division. In this, he, too, agrees with a majority of 62 critics, none of whom concede a first division berth. Nine grant fifth place, but 37 name sixth, 12 seventh position, and 4 the cellar. Well, at any rate, the Sox have something to work for to upset this dope. Majority opinion favors the Athletics to repeat.

We'll see you out at Cub park giving them the send-off.

In discussing shooting the other day, the doctor, our entertaining host, swears that when he was in his prime he could tell by the feel of his gun whether the bullet has struck flesh, wood, or earth. His explanation was that the bullet, in coursing its way through the air, so arranged the ether waves that the vibration of the object when hit traveled back over the course of the bullet into his gun, thus telling him what had been hit.

A NIGHT LETTER from Ring Lardner

Tucson, Ariz., April 13.—Willis Clough, Pittsburgh's rookie pitcher, has been so overwhelmed by his first glimpse of a big league town that he is no longer content to relate his experiences by mail, but is now using that new invention, the telegraph, to keep his friends informed as to what is going on. Here is the important wire received from him tonight from Chicago: "Am so excited that I can't hardly hold the pencil still on account of being so excited on account of opening the regular season tomorrow against the Cubs and maybe I will get into the opening game as I asked Manager Ens this afternoon who was libel to pitch and he says it was between Kremer or Wood or French or Meine or Spencer of Swetonic so I says any chance of me getting in and he says yes if the game runs over till Wednesday. It looks like manager Hornsby would pitch either Root or Blake or Smith or Bush or May or Sweetland. We had a morning practice at the Cubs park this morning. There has been a lot of worry about whether Paul Waner would be able to play on account of his leg. He is O. K. and I found out why they call him 'Poison' and it is because he was bit by a fish in the leg and 'poison' is the French word for fish."

Sox Beat Hens in Exhibition Final, 13-8

Toledo, O., April 13.—[Special.]—The White Sox tarried here long enough this afternoon to conclude their spring training tour with a victory over the Toledo Mudhens. The count was 13 to 8.

Jim Moore's pitching was not especially bothersome for the home boys and his efforts were further complicated because of muffed flys by Simons and Watwood.

The Sox made the victory easy for themselves by rolling up seven runs during the appearance of John Scott, ex-Giant. Score:

an exception, at least thus far, so there is no reason to complain about his being among those present.

Blue's Arm Improves.

The acquisition of Blue completed the attempt to weld together an infield of big league proportions. As a fielder, Blue needs no advertising. The throwing arm which made him useless last season appears to have corrected itself. As a second sacker, Cissell has demonstrated that he can cover ground with the best of them, if he keeps his heart in his work. Appling appears to be on the way to fame and Kamm, as a fielder, is as skilled as when he broke into the big time sensationally back in 1923. The outfield also is better, even though Jolley and Reynolds still must master certain little defensive tricks.

Pitching, which on paper, is about as strong as possessed by any team in the league, is worrisome, and Bush admits it. Ted Lyons, the ace of 1930, is out of commission and until he proves himself otherwise cannot be reckoned on. Thomas thinks he is back where he left off in 1929, but will have to demonstrate. Caraway by his spring work indicated his sudden ascension last year was not a flash. Frasier is a great possibility, Faber will be able to work occasionally. McKain is the ideal relief man. Braxton may help. The same for Moore.

Problem Is Complicated.

For the time being Bush is to have Thomas, Caraway, Braxton, and Frasier as his starting quartet. If discovery is made that Thomas' arm is not what is hoped for, alternations will have to be made accordingly. This would force Faber and McKain to alternate as starters. Or Ted Lyons might suddenly get going. Bush thinks he'll work the latter about Saturday or Sunday. If both Lyons and Thomas should be kept out for any length of time, the authorities might have to drag the river for Bush. It will be bad enough even if only one of them can't function properly.

Among those in the Cleveland ensemble tomorrow will be Bill Hunnefield, who did a few years as a member of the Sox. The Indians salvaged him from Toledo for the draft price and now hope to have him prove worthy of a regular job at short. That Bill can do it is doubtful. The infield undoubtedly will keep the Indians from being anything else than an also ran.

EQUIPOISE WINS GLEN OAKS PURSE IN ROMP; PAYS 1-4

Derby Favorite Leads by Three Lengths.

Havre de Grace, Md., April 13.—(AP)—C. V. Whitney's Equipoise, leading money winning juvenile of 1930, made his 1931 debut in the Glen Oaks purse here today and won over a fair field of three year olds. Equipoise, which is the future book favorite for the Preakness and Kentucky Derby, showed a sensational effort in leading home the field.

The son of Pennant-Swinging, while he has not filled out to any great extent over his two year old physique, is nevertheless in great physical condition, and capable of carrying his speed over any distance of ground.

Wins by Three Lengths.

The bearer of the light blue and brown silks had no trouble in taking down the purse. He was under wraps for the entire trip and at the end, Jockey Arthur Robertson was looking back at the field, having the colt under a strong pull. Three lengths back came G. D. Widener's Panetian, with H. T. Archibald's Dark Hero third, another four lengths back.

Equipoise today was the cynosure of all eyes in the turf world and the appearance of his name on the program was the magnet which drew race fans from Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, Wilmington, and New York as the 12 day meeting of the Harford Agricultural and Breeders' association was inaugurated with charity day, the proceeds going to the fund for the unemployed.

Pays 1 to 4 in Mutuels.

The start of the Glen Oaks was poor. Equipoise got away in second place, while Panetian rushed to the front. Dark Hero was away lengths back of the field. Panetian took a length lead over Equipoise, while the latter was under restraint. Going to the half mile pole Panetian led by a head, but entering the stretch Equipoise was rushed to the front and all through the final furlong he was just galloping home to victory. His time for the six furlongs was 1:11 3-5, which is 3-5 of a second slower than the track record. Equipoise paid $3.50 for a $2 ticket.

The Whitney colt is eligible for the Chesapeake, a mile and a sixteenth test to be run at Havre de Grace Saturday, April 25, and he may start. It probably will be his final workout for the Preakness.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN OF OHIO UNIT IS FORMED

Cleveland, O., April 13.—(AP)—A Madison Square Garden corporation of Ohio was organized here late today to promote boxing matches in the new municipal stadium, which practically has been selected for the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling world heavyweight title bout July 3 or 4.

William F. Carey of the New York Madison Square Garden announced that Dick Dunn, promoter for the Boston Garden, will come here May 1 to set up offices to promote bouts for the Ohio unit. Dunn participated with Carey and city officials in conferences today which, Carey said, settled everything but final legal details and duties of Clevelanders to head the corporation.

The contract by which the Garden corporation will lease the stadium for the title bout was amended today to provide that the rental be $20,000 instead of $25,000, and that the city will contribute nothing instead of $2,500 to the cost of field equipment. This equipment, including field platforms and seats for 40,000, will revert to the city without cost after the bout.

WIND, RAIN HALT WOOD'S ATTEMPT FOR SPEED MARK

Miami Beach, Fla., April 13.—(AP)—Brisk easterly cross winds continued today to prevent Gar Wood from attempting to set a world's motorboat speed record. Weather bureau predictions for tomorrow were not bright. Bringing occasional showers, the wind whipped across the Indian Creek course at a velocity of about fifteen miles an hour and kept Wood's Miss America IX. in its cradle at his private dock.

Weather bureau officials tonight said the wind would continue easterly or probably the next two days, but added it should diminish gradually. The present speedboat record is 103.49 miles an hour established by Kaye Don, British race car driver, in his Miss England II.

GREY'S LAKE FANS TO SEE McMILLEN WRESTLE HAGEN

A contingent of wrestling fans from Grey's Lake, Ill., home town of Jim McMillen, is expected to be present at the Stadium a week from tonight when the former Illinois football star grapples George Hagen of Londos. This bout is to be the headliner of a program headlined by the match between Jim Londos and Ed Kwariani, in which Londos' title will be at stake.

The only one of the supporting bouts arranged so far will bring Heavyweight Frank Bronowicz and George Kotsos.

Berg Seeks to Lose Weight for Canzoneri

Admitting that his ability to make the 135 pound limit was causing him apprehension, Jack Kid Berg, junior welterweight champion, abandoned plans to start immediate training here yesterday and went to Waukesha, Wis.

There he will spend the greater part of four days taking mud baths and doing road work before his return late in the week to finish drill for his championship fight with Tony Canzoneri at the Chicago Stadium a week from Friday.

Berg originally signed to meet Canzoneri for the lightweight championship. Since this limit is far below his own title weight, his junior welterweight championship also will be at stake. Berg has no apprehension about actually weighing 135 pounds, but he fears making that poundage will weaken him too much.

Berg expects his road work and the baths at Waukesha to bring him to a point where he will be able to come in without a great deal of drying out on the day of the fight. It will be less injurious to him to be down to weight for four or five days than it will be to take off ½ a pound or more on the afternoon of the bout. Canzoneri will come in at less than 135 pounds. It was this point which prompted Canzoneri to make the first defense of his title against Berg. He felt certain Berg would have difficulty with the weight and that his usual style and stamina would be hampered accordingly.

Metzger to Help Coach at Catholic University

Bert Metzger, star guard on Notre Dame's championship team last fall, has signed to assist Head Coach Bergman at Catholic university, Washington, D. C., in spring football practice.

George Voigt to Play for U. S. in British Amateur

New York, April 13.—[Special.]—Although there will be no Bobby Jones to represent the United States in the British amateur golf championship at Westward Ho next month, there will be at least one leading player from this country who will enter the lists and try to bring the trophy back here again.

George Voigt, who lost to Jones in the semi-finals at St. Andrews last year, announced today that he was going over for the championship once more.

Competing in the event for the first time last season, following the Walker cup matches, Voigt gave Jones a terrific fight and led by two up at the thirteenth. He was beaten on the final green.

Voigt plans to sail May 5 and has already filed his entry for the championship, which starts on May 18. With the exception of John Forsman of Winged Foot, a clubmate of Voigt's, there have been no other amateurs from this country who have announced their intention of competing abroad, and there is little likelihood of there being a wholesale invasion this year. Cyril Tolley, former British amateur champion, now in this country, is expected to take part.

Two Westchester professionals have signified their intention of competing in the British open, as well as in two other British tournaments, one at Southport that starts May 11 and the other at Leeds, which gets under way on May 15. Joe Turnesa, victor in the Leeds tourney two seasons ago, and Tony Manero, one of those who showed to advantage in the recent winter tour, plan to leave on April 29.

PROPERTY IS NOT ONLY DAMAGE IN FOREST FIRES

Wisconsin Out Thousands in Game and Fish.

BY BOB BECKER.

The big forest fires which are sweeping through northern Wisconsin will inflict not only severe losses on physical properties, including town buildings and timber, but they are going to take thousands of dollars from the suffering localities by killing wild game, injuring fishing, and causing summer vacationists to shun the region.

Nobody likes to go trout fishing on a blackened stream lined with charred stumps. Nobody chooses to camp in a destroyed forest which has been rendered lifeless by fire. These after effects of a devastating fire are not usually counted in the loss side of such a conflagration, any more than the states give out figures on the losses in wild game and song birds.

Deer Represent Cash.

A group of fires of the size which are destroying miles of Wisconsin wilderness country actually kill a startling amount of game birds and animals. These are of definite economic value. Wild deer alone represent many hundreds of thousands of dollars' income to Wisconsin. In an open year, when hunters are permitted to shoot a buck, the gunners sweep through a state, leaving a trail of cash behind them. During the summer season wild deer are a definite money asset because tourists want to see deer in their native haunts.

The big fire which is wiping out so many miles of timber around Crandon and Laona is not far from one of Uncle Sam's new national forest units, where the government is turning a vast tract of cutover land into a lovely tree growing recreational area. This forest unit is known as the Argonne and extends for miles east of Three Lakes, Wis. If the fire should include this section it will undo the reforestation work of several years.

Fr ls Anglers' Hopes.

Many fishermen will see trout fishing plans shattered by the Crandon blaze, which has been burning on a long front, because there are several popular trout streams near that town. Moreover, if the virgin forest which still stands in that section is burned, the scenic loss will be considerable, because the lofty hemlocks which arch over the highway cannot be replaced for many decades.

According to reports from fishermen in both Wisconsin and Michigan, rain is needed, not only to stop the fire hazards but make the season safe for fish.

LEWIS DEFEATS GEORGE IN COAST WRESTLING BOUT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., April 13.—Ed [Strangler] Lewis won a claim to the world's wrestling championship for the fourth time in his career here tonight by pinning Don George, University of Michigan athlete, in two straight falls in a match advertised as for the world's title.

Lewis won the first fall in 1 hour 19 minutes 26 seconds following a series of six headlocks. He tossed George for the deciding fall in 7 minutes 43 seconds with a hammerlock which George could not break.

Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame full back, threw Myron Cox of Venice, Cal., in one fall in the preliminary bout.

CLAIM TRUCKS PAY FULL SHARE OF ROAD COSTS

Operators Appear Here at Legislative Hearing.

BY HAL FOUST.

A legislative subcommittee headed by Representative G. J. Johnson of Paxton met in Chicago yesterday and took testimony from trucking interests on the fifty bills pending before the general assembly. The bills would place further taxes or further relations upon commercial transportation on Illinois highways.

A. G. Perry, representing a firm that hauls between Detroit and Chicago, declared that trucks are performing a public service that cannot be obtained from railroads, with platform pickups and platform deliveries, and that to curtail this service with oppressive taxes and regulations would be to deprive the public of economical transportation affecting the cost of living generally.

Cite Tax Contribution.

In response to a question as to whether trucks and buses are paying a fair amount for their use of the highways, figures were cited purporting to show that these commercial vehicles paid $22,296,736 in taxes to Illinois during 1930, as compared with $24,184,566 paid by private passenger cars. The figures also showed that the 1,429,146 passenger cars in the state traveled 5,716,584,000 miles during the year, an average of 4,000 miles per car, while trucks and buses covered 1,857,623,464 miles, an average of 8,883 miles per vehicle.

"Private passenger cars," reads the pamphlet prepared by the Allied Motor Transportation Interests of Illinois, "used the highways four times as many miles as trucks and buses, and paid only slightly more in taxes, yet the ratio of passenger cars to trucks and buses is seven to one."

Quote U. S. Highway Official.

The truck men are quoting widely Thomas H. McDonald, chief of the United States bureau of public roads, for his testimony before the interstate commerce commission, in which he said:

"In my judgment, the heavier trucks and buses, by the higher tax which they pay, and particularly through the gasoline tax, are fully meeting excess costs of road construction due to the increased thickness that is made necessary by these heavier loads."

Point to Many Employés.

The truck and bus men represent that they have $600,425,000 invested in Illinois in vehicles and appurtenances and that 787,400 persons depend upon the highway shipping industry for a living in this state. For example, 7,000,000 pounds of milk are trucked daily in Illinois, an operation that requires 6,000 drivers and 350 mechanics. Last year 766,442 head of live stock were delivered to the Union stock yards by truck.

The legislative subcommittee is making a study preparatory to drafting a committee bill or bills on commercial uses of the highways. Other hearings will be held in Springfield.

When You CAN'T QUIT

Fatigue is the signal to rest. Obey it if you can. When you can't, keep cool and carry-on in comfort.

Bayer Aspirin was meant for just such times, for it insures your comfort. Freedom from those pains that nag at nerves and wear you down. One tablet will block that threatening headache while it is still just a threat. Take two or three tablets when you've caught a cold, and that's usually the end of it.

Carry Bayer Aspirin when you travel. Have some at home and keep some at the office. Like an efficient secretary, it will often "save the day" and spare you many uncomfortable, unproductive hours. Perfectly harmless, so keep it handy, keep it in mind, and use it. No man of affairs can afford to ignore the score and more of uses explained in the proven directions. From a grumbling tooth to those rheumatic pains which seem almost to bend the bones, Bayer Aspirin is ready with its quick relief—and always works. Neuralgia. Neuritis. Any nagging, needless pain.

Bayer-Tablets Aspirin Genuine

Get the genuine tablets, stamped with the Bayer cross. They are of perfect purity, absolute uniformity, and have the same action every time. Why experiment with imitations costing a few cents less? The saving is too little. There is too much at stake. But there is economy in the purchase of genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets in the large bottles.

SUPREME COURT JARS HOTEL ADVERTISING OF RADIO IN EVERY ROOM

Washington, D. C., April 13.—[Special.]—"Radio in every room" advertising by hotels received a jolt today when the United States Supreme court decided that it is a violation of the copyright laws for a hotel to receive and transmit broadcast musical compositions to the rooms of its guests without permission of the song writer.

The opinion was in an appeal of a suit brought by Gene Buck and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers against the Jewell-La Salle Realty company. The La Salle hotel in Kansas City, it was shown, has a master receiving set and head phones or loud speakers in the guest rooms, and had been receiving and transmitting programs.

Justice Brandeis said in his opinion: "There is no difference in substance between the case where a hotel engages an orchestra to furnish music and that where by means of the radio set and loud speakers are employed. It furnishes the same music for the same purpose. In each the music is produced by instrumentalities under its control."

The court said it was not called upon to determine whether profit was involved.

SUPREME COURT SANCTIONS OIL PATENT POOLING

Decree Exonerates Four Refiners.

BY O. A. MATHER.

What probably is the final chapter in the queerest tangle of litigation in the history of American industry was written yesterday. The United States supreme court gave sanction to the agreement among the principal oil refiners whereby they pooled their patented processes for extracting gasoline from crude oil. These companies, in turn, licensed their processes to other refiners.

The decree exonerated the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, the Texas corporation, and the Gasoline Products company of combining in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act. The government had brought suit against the companies and had obtained an earlier decision against them in the federal district court of northern Illinois.

Patents Become Valuable.

The tangle dates back to the rise of the automobile industry. Several refining companies had experimented with methods of distilling or "cracking" crude oil to produce gasoline and, it seems, were able to obtain patents on their various processes. With the vast increase in the use of gasoline as the motor vehicle came into general use, these patents took on immense value. The result was a series of patent infringement suits among the big refining companies in which claims for damages ran to hundreds of millions of dollars.

In fact, so staggering were the damages sought and so uncertain was the whole patent situation that the big companies finally agreed to drop their suit against each other and pool their processes. They also designed a system of permitting other refiners to use the processes on a royalty basis. The government's suit attacked these agreements as restricting competition and increasing the cost of gasoline. The decision of the Supreme court held that no monopoly resulted and upheld the general arrangement by saying "an interchange of patent rights and a division of royalties according to the value attributed by the parties to their respective patents is frequently necessary if technical advancement is not to be blocked by threatened litigation."

May Affect Pending Suits.

It is this language that, according to patent experts, may exert an important bearing on somewhat similar suits brought by the government and now pending against the Radio Corporation of America, the General Electric company, the American Telephone and Telegraph company and several other big corporations.

The mass of patent litigation that held the principal refiners to make a pooling agreement was explained by Elmer G. Seubert, president of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana last night.

"The amounts involved were so enormous that no company could afford to jeopardize its capital in the threatened litigation," he said. "Cracking would have been impossible because of fear of liabilities for infringement. But use of the automobile was increasing by leaps and bounds and the demand for gasoline was going rapidly ahead of the ability of refiners to supply it by the old refining processes.

All Agree to Pooling.

"So all companies concerned agreed to license each other to use the processes. It assured plentiful production on reasonable terms. It was a wise and sensible business settlement of a situation too modern and complicated for the patent laws to settle.

"The opinion of the Supreme court clearly affirms these facts. It establishes the good motives of the accused companies and the benefits resulting from their action. The decision will be of great value in establishing the right of business interests to make contracts needed to meet modern conditions when those contracts are beneficial not only to the business interests concerned but also to the public good."

Ask Compulsory Use of Canadian Grain Boats

OTTAWA, Ont., April 13.—(AP)—The Dominion Marine association at its annual meeting today urged that the government compel the use of Canadian boats for movement of Canadian grain destined for export. Under the present laws boats registered in the United States can be used. Alfred Duclos, minister of marine, promised consideration of the proposal.

Wheat Trade Eyes Drought Spectre in Spring Crop Area

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Weather conditions in the American and Canadian northwest have become the dominating influence in the wheat market, and the spectre of a major drought scare following the unusual dryness of last year, which resulted in the smallest crop since 1901, is now taking shape.

According to expressions by some of the leading members of the Chicago Board of Trade, there is sufficient bullishness in the dry weather scare in the northwest to bring about a material upturn in wheat prices, regardless of the large prospective carry-over from the old crop. Dust storms have been reported for about a week in the spring wheat area, and unless rains come immediately it is felt that seeding will be delayed and the acreage may be affected downward.

Subsoil Moisture Lacking.

Not only is there a lack of surface moisture in the spring wheat area, as is suggested by the dust storms, but official and private reports for some time have been complaining of the lack of subsoil reserve, which is an important factor in determining the size of the yields in that section. Members of the trade who were out in the country over the week-end returned with stories of abnormal dryness for this season of the year in parts of Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin, and Nebraska also sent in reports of moisture being needed during the day. The official Illinois report, as compiled by Agricultural Statistician A. J. Surratt, said subsoil moisture is generally deficient.

Wheat Highest in Month.

Wheat prices were on the upgrade from the start, and while the best figures were not maintained, due to profit taking and selling against offers, the finish was at net gains of ¾@⅞c, July touching 64¾c early, the highest figure since March 12, and closed at 63⅞c, while September was 63¼@62½c and December 65¼@65⅛c. May was unchanged at 83⅛c.

Adding to the increasing bullish comment which is being heard in the wheat trade was the continued aggressive export demand for Canadian grain, with sales of 1,500,000 bu or more in all positions, with houses with seaboard and foreign connections persistent buyers of futures at Winnipeg. The latter closed ⅝@¾c higher, with July 62½c, while Liverpool was 1¼@1¼d higher, with July 66c. The latter market reported a more active local and continental demand for cash wheat and called attention to the decrease of 13,000,000 bu in stocks afloat during the past month. An official German report showed 20,000,000 bu wheat on farms in that country, against 32,000,000 bu last year, and a leading German miller estimated import needs at 40,000,000 bu between now and harvest. A lowering in the import duty into that country is expected.

Visible Supply Decreases.

A decrease of 2,271,000 bu in the domestic visible supply was a surprise to the wheat trade, being the first reduction of consequence in a number of weeks, the total being 199,561,000 bu, against 143,519,000 bu last year. The shipments of over 1,000,000 bu wheat from Duluth last week went to Canadian ports and were dropped from the domestic total.

Corn was affected to a large extent by the action of wheat and closed ½@⅝c higher, with May, 61¼@61⅝c; July, 63¼@63¾c; September, 61¼@61½c, and December, 54½c. Country offerings remain small and local receipts were down to 79 cars, while the basis in the sample market was unchanged to ½c higher. A decrease of 302,000 bu was shown in the visible supply, despite the reports of a slow shipping demand of late, and the total is now down to 19,644,000 bu, against 23,280,000 bu last year.

Bigger Barley Business.

In addition to the aggressive European buying of Manitoba wheat, there has been a big business passing of late in barley. Sales of the latter grain yesterday were estimated at 1,000,000 bu or more, and messages from Winnipeg expressed the belief it might be possible to get rid of the surplus before another crop is harvested. Some interest is also being shown in Canadian rye.

There was no material pressure on the local oats market and the close was ¼@⅜c higher, with May, 30½c; July, 31¼c, and September, 31c. Cash houses were on the buying side, and the strength in other grains was also a factor. Rye finished ½@⅝c higher, with some selling of July against purchases of corn. Dry weather reports from the northwest, which raises the bulk of the commercial crop of the country, attracted considerable attention. May closed at 37c; July, 39½c, and September, 41⅝c.

BUILDERS AND MERCHANTS BANK ORDERED CLOSED

The Builders and Merchants Bank and Trust company, 5437 North Clark street, has been closed by the state auditor following an examination in which it was disclosed that the cash resources of the institution were inadequate. The auditor requested an examination of the bank's books.

As of the last call on March 25 the bank showed total resources of $5,494,592, with cash $376,977, United States government securities $320,978, and other securities $1,058,241.

Demand deposits as of the same date amounted to $1,560,959 and time deposits aggregated $2,396,291. Capital of the bank was $450,000. Last fall the Builders bank was merged with the Capitol State Savings bank. Paul C. Mellander is president.

CHICAGO MECCA FOR BUYERS FROM THE MIDDLE WEST

Chicago was the Mecca yesterday for buyers from all over the middle west, who came here to attend the first anniversary sale at the Merchandise Mart. Two thousand manufacturers and exhibitors had on display 10,000 tables of "specials" for the occasion. One of the largest delegations was a party of twenty-five from Memphis, Tenn., headed by J. T. Blatt. While it was stated that the buying was generally good, the floors devoted to knit goods, infants' and children's wear, and art goods and gifts were the most active. The special sales will close today.

O. K. Withdrawal of More Water from Niagara Falls

OTTAWA, Ont., April 13.—(AP)—Permission to withdraw temporarily 10,000 cubic feet per second of additional water through the existing passages on each side of Niagara Falls is recommended by the special international board whose final report on its two years' inquiry was made public today. The board sought to determine what additional water might be diverted for power purposes without injury to the scenic beauty of the falls.

The personnel of the board included J. T. Johnston, director of the dominion water powers branch, and Dr. Charles Camsell, deputy minister of mines, representing Canada; and Lieut. Col. Dewitt C. Jones, U. S. A., and Dr. J. H. McFarland, past president of the American Civic association, for the United States.

BRITISH GRAIN EXPERT INDICTS U. S. FARM BOARD

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, April 13.—A severe indictment of the United States farm board and the Canadian wheat pool was made today by Sir Herbert Robson, British expert, who attended the recent grain conference in Rome as a delegate from London of the Corn Trade association.

Writing in the London Times Robson declares that the present "disastrous" position in the world's grain markets has been caused by the intervention of governments in the exporting countries, by the accumulation of enormous stocks, and in the importing countries by regulations which prevent bread of fine quality from being sold, and by customs duties which increase the price.

Without governmental backing, he asserts, the enormous stocks of grain now stored in the United States and Canada could not have been accumulated, "as distribution would have been made in an orderly, normal manner and the market would not have been threatened by an avalanche from these enormous unneeded accumulations."

The results of government intervention across the Atlantic are a clear warning, in his opinion, against the international wheat marketing committee which has been suggested.

Tells of Part Psychology Plays During Depression

BY SCRUTATOR.

What share has mental attitude—or psychology—in this thing called business depression?

Much has been said in an indefinite way about the effect of psychology on the stock market and industry in general. In order to get more authoritative information on this subject the Illinois Society for Mental Hygiene yesterday met to hear the views of a psychiatrist, an economist, and a business engineer.

They were told by James O. McKinsey, head of an accounting firm, that not only the present depression but the preceding period of prosperity may be attributed largely to mental attitude.

Attitude Is Changing.

"Most of the basic industries," he said, "during the boom years of 1921-1929 were actually less profitable than in the period from 1905 to 1913."

He produced figures showing that, taking each group as a whole, companies operating in the coal, copper, meat packing, oil, textile, and lead and zinc industries made considerably less money in the nine years ended in 1929 than in the nine years preceding the war.

"Up to now business men and bankers have been content to wait passively for better times. But their attitude is changing now. They are starting to do something about it."

As an illustration he cited the head of an anthracite coal mining company who, refusing to admit that profits in this industry were impossible because of low prices, increased the efficiency of his plants, cut 88 cents more from a selling price of $4.50 per ton, and is making money without having lowered wages.

"Recent experience has shown," he said, "that the goods will move if the price is right. In the next few years there will be a premium on managerial brains and we're going to have a big turnover of executives. There will have to be a pruning of useless expenses, and I don't mean labor."

Seen Big Factor.

Prof. Garfield V. Cox, University of Chicago economist, described mental attitude as a "tremendous factor" in the ups and downs of the business cycle.

"People who have been lifted to a high pitch of optimism are inclined to plunge immediately into exactly the opposite frame of mind," he said. "Under the competitive system in which we operate, these oscillations are inevitable.

"When business is booming there is an increasing demand for money. This demand gets up to a certain point and then the banks begin calling loans. Public confidence dwindles and curtailment sets in."

Dr. H. Douglas Singer, professor of psychiatry in the University of Illinois medical school, pointed out the effect on the public health of prolonged business depression.

During the war, according to Dr. Singer, there was actually less mental illness, due to the fact that there was plenty of work to keep men busy. Recently, he said, there has been an increase in the number of cases of mental illness.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 13.—Enough buoyancy developed from scattered short covering operations to keep the waterlogged stock market afloat for another day. Trading weather continued at a dead calm, the turnover totaling barely 1,600,000 shares. Prices generally showed improvement.

With the peak of the spring business rise apparently passed, Wall street is evidently looking forward to a prolonged period of relative dullness and is taking care not to let its spell of watchful waiting cost it unduly. The professionals feel impelled to go through their daily dozens—stock exchange seats are so high one just must do something to keep the wheels going. It seems—but the public remains doggedly aloof. Hence it falls that volume shrinks to smaller proportions day by day.

Today's show of activity converged in not more than a dozen issues out of the entire list. Of these a majority were given whirls for 2 to 3 points or so, but a sizeable group came out the other end with losses.

HOW ARE YOU BUYING YOUR NEW CAR— Piece by Piece or All at Once?

AUTO SALES Can Pave the Way for PROSPERITY

Making and selling motor cars is America's giant industry. In normal times a million people are engaged in the manufacture and sale of automobiles and accessories. In addition, when the auto industry is busy, workers in scores of other industries also are kept busy. Auto makers consume one-sixth of the steel, one-fourth of the lead and nickel, three-fifths of the leather upholstery, three-fourths of the plate glass, and seven-eighths of the rubber consumed in this country.

If you help put people back to work in these industries by buying a new car, your own business or income can't help but feel the beneficial effect. So . . .

Treat yourself and family to a new car . . . and help bring back prosperity.

Tune in WGN tonight at 10:10 and enjoy the delightful program sponsored by the Chicago Automobile Trade Association

Are you going to be content to buy a new car piece by piece as you replace worn out parts? Or are you going to buy it all at once and enjoy the thrill of new-car ownership at the best time of all the year for enjoying a new automobile?

Dealers are making special Spring showings of the auto industry's latest offerings. Complete lines of stock models are on display in downtown and neighborhood showrooms.

You are invited to attend these showings!

CHICAGO STOCK PRICES CRAWL A LITTLE HIGHER

Best Figures Reached in Late Trading.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

The professional traders showed a little more inclination to disregard the usual hazards of the current market situation and prices crawled forward to achieve meager gains on the Chicago exchange yesterday. Public participation still remained a negligible factor and the total volume of transactions continued small.

The best prices of the day came late in the trading and although they were only slightly above last week's final quotations they represented about the only variation from the downward trend seen in several days.

Lincoln Printing Rises.

Among the issues which made moderate advances was the common stock of the Lincoln Printing company. There was a double reason why the issue might attract purchasers. The company yesterday reported that net earnings for the first quarter of 1931 were slightly in excess of the first quarter of 1930.

Net profit for the 1931 period was $99,161, equivalent after preferred dividends to $1.35 per common share. This compares with $255,718, or $1.50 a share, in the corresponding 1930 period. To add to this was the action of directors who voted to pay the regular quarterly dividend on the common stock, which amounts to 50c.

At a meeting of stockholders of another company in the same field, the W. F. Hall Printing company, the plan to issue $1,000,000 in preferred stock was approved. The authorized capitalization was increased from $1,000,000 to $5,000,000.

This paves the way for the acquisition by Hall of the Art Color Printing company of Dunellen, N. J. While negotiations have not been completed it is expected that the Chicago printing concern will pay $1,700,000 in stock and $1,000,000 in preferred stock for the eastern property.

Sees Increased Earnings.

Consummation of the merger will lengthen the business in the east, president Frank R. Warren of Hall said. The increase in volume which can be handled without proportionate increase in overhead will make for increased earnings, he stated.

It was reported in La Salle street yesterday that Associated Apparel Industries is negotiating for a loan of $1,000,000 from a finance company. It is understood that the loan would be secured by receivables. If obtained the loan would enable the firm to pay off bank loans and provide additional working capital. The company's stock has been inactive here since its sharp break last week. It has recovered some on the New York exchange and closed yesterday at 12¾.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The committee formed to protect holders of first mortgage 5 per cent bonds of the Chicago Auditorium association reported that the property could not be operated at a profit and advised against an assessment to make good existing and prospective deficits. However, it has asked the shareholders whether they would be willing to meet an assessment amounting to about $376,000, or 37 per cent of the funded debt.

J. B. Leach & Co., Inc., and Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., are offering today at a price of $2,000,000 two-year 6 per cent gold notes of the Western Power, Light and Telephone company at 99¾ and interest to yield about 6¼ per cent. These notes are due Feb. 15, 1933.

Financing for Niagara Gas corporation, a new holding company for natural gas properties in New York state, will consist of a new issue of 100,000 shares of no par common stock. The offering will be marketed by a syndicate headed by G. Y. Grace & Co.

The New York stock exchange has ruled that Nox Film corporation class A common shall be ex-rights until 10. Rights may be traded in on and after that date. Rights expire May 12.

New England Public Service.

Can you please give me information relative to the New England Public Service company prior lien preferred stock?—K. A. B.

New England Public Service company is indirectly controlled by Middle West Utilities company. It furnishes electric light and power, gas, water, railway, and bus service to 533 communities in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, and New York.

Reflecting in part recent acquisitions, net income has shown an upward trend since incorporation in 1925. For 1930 balance applicable to stocks of the holding company was $2,499,728. Annual dividend requirements on the $6 and $7 prior lien preferred total $1,200,000. Balance applicable to the holding company for 1929 was $3,164,667.

The prior lien stock, both series, has preference as to cumulative dividends and assets over all other classes of stock. The $6 and $7 preferred stocks have second preference as to cumulative dividends and assets.

In order to increase its investment in the junior securities of the operating subsidiaries and to retire its short term debt, the company in March, 1931, offered 40,000 additional shares of $7 prior lien preferred.

Outstanding capitalization, giving effect to this financing, will consist of 120,000 shares of $7 prior lien preferred, 60,000 shares of $6 prior lien preferred, 47,552 shares of $7 preferred, 1,022 shares of $7 adjustment preferred, 70,000 shares of $6 preferred, 29,805 shares of $5 convertible preferred, and 940,079 shares of common, all with no stated par value. There is no funded debt.

The prior lien preferred stock deserves a fairly good rating.

American Inst. of Financial Counsel.

Will you please tell me if the American Institute of Financial Counsel, 303 5th avenue, New York City, is a reliable service or not?—S. D. C.

This concern states that its minimum service charge is $1,000 annually. Following is a report, dated April 1, 1931, that we have received from the Better Business Bureau of New York City:

"In reply to your inquiry, we would state that the subject concern rented desk space in the early part of March, 1931, at 303 5th aven

OPEN CONTEST OVER PURCHASE OF ALTON ROAD

I.C.C. Hears Rival Claims of B. & O., Stockholders

Washington, D. C., April 13.—(AP)—The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company and stockholders of the bankrupt Chicago and Alton today opened their contest before the interstate commerce commission over the price to be paid for the insolvent road.

The railroad company claims the Chicago and Alton is worth only $75,000,000, which its president, Daniel Willard, estimated it would cost his organization. The stockholders contend it is worth much more and that they have an equity of at least $65,000,000 over the debts of the line.

President Willard and George M. Shriver, senior vice president, outlined advantages to the public they claim would accrue through their acquisition of the line and of negotiation leading to the purchase of the Chicago and Alton at a receivership sale in Illinois last December.

Has Asked Permit.

The Alton company, formed by the Baltimore and Ohio, has applied to the commission for a permit to take over the railroad and the Baltimore and Ohio has applied for permission to acquire the capital stock of the new company.

Shriver testified the Baltimore and Ohio had paid $22,050,295 for all except $711,000 worth of two bond issues which had matured but on which interest had been defaulted, $2,500,000 of expenses and assumed a $45,000,000 bond issue not due for 19 years and $4,545,400 worth of other debts. This with the $23,000,000 paid into the federal court for the road would have made a total of $97,145,795, but it was explained that the price really was only approximately $75,000,000 due to the fact that the money paid into court would be repaid to the Baltimore and Ohio to retire the bonds it holds.

Shriver said the road stood ready for a reasonable length of time to pay $80 a hundred for the outstanding $711,000 worth of the matured bond issues.

Decision of Officials.

Willard said the Baltimore and Ohio officials decided last year that if they could get the Chicago and Alton for approximately $75,000,000 they would do so. On this basis, he said, a new company could be capitalized and the road could earn enough to meet necessary charges. The old capitalization, he termed "too high."

Willard said that while the Alton would be operated as an independent road for the present if the commission permitted the B. & O. to have the line it would benefit by possible consolidation of terminal facilities and the assistance the B. & O. could give in loaning cars and locomotives. This statement was taken as an intimation that the Chicago and Alton would abandon use of the Chicago Union station in favor of the Baltimore and Ohio Grand Central station.

SPANISH PESETA SAGS FOLLOWING ELECTION NEWS

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

New York, April 13.—The Spanish elections today came as a surprise in the extent of the republican victory and were followed this morning by heavy selling of pesetas in London, causing a break of 60 points in that market to 10.40. This was followed by a decline in New York, where the selling was generally in huge blocks and on large offers to 10.23, a loss of 89 points in all.

Dutch exchange continued extremely strong, being in continued demand for remittance of proceeds of stock sales in this market, and had a further advance of 3 points to 40.50. Sterling was unchanged at 4.85 15-16. German showed an easy tone and yielded ¾ to 23.80¾. Scandinavians were also lower.

INDIANA LIMESTONE PRESIDENT FORESEES BUSINESS RECOVERY

Basing his statements on the result of a nation-wide survey of construction activity in the first quarter of the year, A. E. Dickinson, president of the Indiana Limestone company, says that the way is being cleared for business recovery and that there is a more optimistic sentiment prevalent based on sound evidence of an upward trend.

"Resumption of residential building this year is expected to add a push to the return of prosperity. In Chicago, residential construction in the first two weeks of March more than doubled the entire month of February and showed a considerable increase over March of last year. Other sections are indicating similar gains," he declared.
